3. The first two stages play a clear training role in helping firms learn what their business is all about.

4. The last stage is devoted to general business policy, the economics of finance and other more global topics such as I/O strategy. This stage usually takes several days in the classroom, and generally appears earlier and more extensive treatment in a firm's training program to allow the manager to bring business issues into the firm's discussion.

Research in the field of aging and memory has shown that older people are more likely to forget names than faces. This is due to the fact that the brain's ability to store names is more limited than its ability to store faces. This is why older people often have trouble remembering names but can easily remember faces. This is also why older people often have trouble remembering names but can easily remember faces.

After this, participants were assigned to one of two treatment and two control groups in order to address the different combinations of the number of friends (smaller versus large) that they had in the community before their treatment and assignment to groups. The first condition to all groups was that they were to be randomly assigned to either receiving either the 100-page or the 20-page book. Participants for the control group also were randomly assigned to either the 100-page or the 20-page book. The second condition was that participants who had fewer than 10 friends in their community before treatment were randomly assigned to either the 100-page or the 20-page book. The third condition was that participants who had 10 or more friends in their community before treatment were randomly assigned to either the 100-page or the 20-page book.
