Victorian scientific exploration while offering vital insights into the extinction of species P lsson vividly recounts how British ornithologists John Wolley and Alfred Newton set out for Iceland to collect specimens only to discover that the great auks were already gone At the time the Victorian world viewed extinction as an impossibility or trivialized it as a natural phenomenon P lsson chronicles how Wolley and Newton documented the fate of the last birds through interviews with the men who killed them and how the naturalists Icelandic journey opened their eyes to the disappearance of species as a subject of scientific concern and as something that could be caused by humans Blending a richly evocative narrative with rare unpublished material as well as insights from ornithology anthropology and P lsson s own North Atlantic travels The Last of Its Kind reveals how the saga of the great auk opens a window onto the human causes of mass extinction The Age of Scientific Naturalism Bernard Lightman, Michael S. Reidy, 2016-02-19 Physicist John Tyndall and his contemporaries were at the forefront of developing the cosmology of scientific naturalism during the Victorian period They rejected all but physical laws as having any impact on the operations of human life and the universe Contributors focus on the way Tyndall and his correspondents developed their ideas through letters periodicals and scientific journals and challenge previously held assumptions about who gained authority and how they attained and defended their position within the scientific community

Life's Splendid Drama Peter J.
