Word Origins

7. The word atom comes from the Greek word atomos, which means "indivisible." Describe the relationship between the Greek term and your understanding of atoms.
An atom is the basic unit of matter. It cannot be broken down by normal chemical means.
8. The p in pH stands for the German word Potenz, which means "power" or "potential." The "H" represents hydrogen ions (H^+). How are these related to the definition of pH?
pH is the strength or concentration of hydrogen ions that makes a solution acidic or basic.
9. The prefix mono- means "one" and the prefix poly- means "many." Some lipids are monounsaturated and others are polyunsaturated. Explain the difference between fatty acids in these different types of lipids.
A monounsaturated lipid has one unsaturated carbon in its fatty acid tail(s); a polyunsaturated lipid has 2 or more unsaturated carbons in its fatty acid tail(s).

Reviewing Main Ideas

10. Explain how the combination of electrons, protons, and neutrons results in the neutral charge of an atom.
Neutrons have no charge. Each proton has a charge of +1, and each electron has a charge of -1. Atoms are neutral when the # of protons and electrons are equal.
11. Potassium ions (K^+) have a positive charge. What happens to a potassium atom's electrons when it becomes an ion?
Loses one electron.
