

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number between 1 and 100 randomly. Sometimes, every time the person enters, it shows the same value. The first time the ball rolled, it was 1 and another 100 times, the computer never generated a new number. It kept showing 1 because that ball rolled. That number happened to appear the most often in that experiment.

However, the distribution was not uniform, and the computer kept the generated number and generated another 100 unique random numbers using the same random generator. The number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment, meaning that number was the most likely to be generated, appearing the most frequently.

The numbers 1 and 100 were the only numbers that appeared the most often in that experiment. For the number 1, the ball rolled, meaning that the number 1 was the most likely to be generated. The computer generated the same random number 100 times, meaning that number was the most likely to be generated. And each number appeared the same through the experiment.

Each time a ball rolled, the computer generated a new number. The number 100 appeared the most often and the number 1 appeared the least often. The number 100 appeared the most often and the number 1 appeared the least often.

The number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment. The number 1 appeared the least often in that experiment. The number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment. The number 1 appeared the least often in that experiment.

The number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment.

The number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment. The number 1 appeared the least often in that experiment.

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS The first time a ball rolled, the number 100 appeared the most often. The number 1 appeared the least often.
