Internal Medicine Residency S:

End-of-life Training in US Internal Medicine Residency Programs Derek S. Cegelka, 2016 Purpose The purpose of this study was to survey the directors of internal medicine residency programs in the United States to determine the current status of end of life care education for internal medicine residents Methods The study featured a cross sectional design with total population sampling All 403 internal medicine residency directors in the United States were surveyed using a 4 wave data collection method to ensure an optimum return rate The response rate was 52.4% 211/403 Results Residency directors reported very high outcome expectations regarding the potential positive outcomes of providing residents with formal training in end of life skills More than 90% of directors believed that the quality of care for patients at the end of life phase would increase if their residents were taught specific knowledge and skills related to end of life care Although directors believed in the potential benefits of providing end of life training to their residents nearly 1 in 4 programs 24% reported not having a formal end of life curriculum in place Another 39% had recently decided to implement an end of life curriculum or had implemented a curriculum in the last 3 years Thus 63% of residency programs either did not have a formal end of life curriculum in place or just recently implemented one Only 36% of programs reported having formal end of life curriculum in place for more than three years Most programs reported spending nine or less hours of instructional time during residency on multiple end of life topical areas such as socio cultural issues 71% patient care 56% professionalism 54% ethical issues 50% and communication 46% The majority of residency directors reported that their programs do not formally evaluate residents competence in end of life topical areas such as socio cultural issues 77% patient care 60% and ethical issues 55% The most common method used to evaluate residents skill competence in caring for patients at end of life was verbal feedback by attending physicians and preceptors The three most prevalent teaching techniques used to teach end of life topics were hospital rounds classroom conference style teaching and teaching by preceptors during outpatient clinics The most common barriers to increasing and or improving end of life education were lack of time in the teaching schedule 46% lack of faculty members certified in Hospice and Palliative Medicine 26% and lack of rotation sites lack of preceptors with needed experience 15% Conclusion Internal medicine physicians play an important role in treating patients with life threatening illnesses including those at the end of life stage It is important that internal medicine residents are well educated in providing excellent care and communication to such patients Although there has been progress over the years in end of life training of US physicians internal medicine residency programs still need improvement in this area

IMG Guide,Applicant Guide,2015-05-26 In Collaboration between the Applicant Guide and the IMG Guide we present to you the most complete and up to date IMG friendly internal medicine residency programs list with full match selection criteria and requirements for these programs This book is essentially written for international medical graduates seeking residency in the US The idea of writing this book came from our insight that many IMGs every year don t match because they don t know where to apply Most of the time they end applying to programs that don t have IMGs or those that don t match their criteria hence they end losing money with no interviews earned The information was gathered from program directors coordinators chiefs faculty and residents It includes Programs names Programs codes States Addresses Phones Faxes Percentage of IMGs in the programs Minimum USMLE Step 1 and Step 2 Score Requirements Attempts on any step CS requirement at time of application USCE Requirements Cut Off time since graduation Programs offering couple match and Visas Sponsored or accepted Medical Education in Pulmonary, Critical Care, and Sleep Medicine Patricia A. Kritek,Jeremy B. Richards,2019-05-14 This is a book for clinician educators It offers modern evidence based practices to use in teaching learners at a range of levels with an emphasis on concrete strategies that teachers can implement in their own clinical practices as well as in small and large group settings Medical education is rapidly changing with emerging evidence on best practices and a proliferation of new technologies As strategies for effectively teaching medical learners evolve it is important to understand the implications for Pulmonary Critical Care and Sleep Medicine PCCM This text is structured to allow easy access to the reader Chapters are organized around level of learner e g medical student to PCCM fellow to practicing physicians as well as the location of teaching Given the variety of clinical settings in which PCCM physicians teach specific consideration of best practices broad changes in curricular design and pedagogy are considered in different clinical contexts Each chapter begins with a focus on why the topic is important for clinician educators A review of the available evidence and relevant medical education theory about the topic follows with examples from specific studies that provide insight into best practices regarding the concepts and topics discussed in the chapter For chapters focusing on learners different environments are considered and similarly if the focus is on the learning environment attention is paid to the approach to different learners Each chapter ends with a summary of the primary points from the chapter and concrete examples of how clinician teachers can put the concepts discussed in the chapter into practice This is an ideal guide for educators in pulmonary critical care and sleep medicine Internal Medicine Benjamin Galen,2012 The transition from medical student to physician is one of the most important events in the life of a young doctor From the moment medical school graduates step foot on the internal medicine ward as real doctors they will be leaving behind civilian life forever Hereafter patients family and friends will look to the new doctor for help and healing counting on years of study and training to have provided the tools to diagnose and treat disease Residency is a challenging time because doctors are charged with learning as much as they can but are also hospital employees with a job to perform The hope of this guide is that an intern will be able to navigate the rocky waters of internship whether remaining in internal medicine residency or matriculating to another field such as dermatology neurology anesthesiology or radiology This guide is not a practical how to as a residency program should provide such support It is however designed to help interns maneuver the pitfalls of the workplace navigate interpersonal interactions and utilize the best tools and practices during the course of their internship
