

Matthew Arnold : The Function of Criticism at the Present Time

Matthew Arnold's essay, "The Function of Criticism at the Present Time" was published in his first collection of critical writings, Essays in Criticism, in 1865. Prior to the publication of these essays, Arnold had just completed some lectures on the translation of Homer-works which bear, in a less developed form, some of Arnold's ideas on the need for new, intelligent criticism in England.

"The Function of Criticism at the Present Time" thus seems a bit of a turning point in Arnold's career; by the time Arnold began writing Culture and Anarchy, he had turned away from his career as a poet to focus on social and theological writings. The project which Arnold began with this essay-to make the reading, middle-class public of England understand the need for a critical spirit in order to provide society with fresh, intelligent ideas-would occupy him fully and it is for this new direction which Arnold takes that would make Arnold interesting to generations after him.

The central argument of the essay responds to what Arnold felt to be the prevailing attitude that the constructive, creative capacity was much more important than the critical faculty. Arnold's expanded definition of criticism, however "the endeavour, in all branches of knowledge, theology, philosophy, history, art, science, to see the object as in itself it really is" renders criticism a necessary prerequisite for truly valuable creation. Specifically, criticism is what generates "fresh" and "intelligent" ideas during a specific time and place in history, and Arnold claim that since literature works with current ideas (literature is "synthesis and exposition"), great works can only be generated in a climate of great ideas. Thus, Arnold argues that criticism prepares the way for creation.

Oxford University Gazette University of Oxford, 1929 Military Integration during War-to-Peace Transitions Lesley Anne Warner, 2023-06-07 In the 1960s only 10% of peace agreements included some element of political military accommodation namely military integration From Burundi to Bosnia to Zimbabwe that number had increased to over 50% by the 2000s However relatively little is understood about this dimension of power sharing often utilized during war to peace transitions Through an examination of the case of South Sudan between 2006 and 2013 this book explores why countries undergoing transitions from war to peace decide to integrate armed groups into a statutory security framework This book details how integration contributed to short term stability in South Sudan allowing the government to overcome wartime factionalism and consolidate political military power prior to the referendum on self determination in 2011 It also examines how the integration process in South Sudan was flawed by its open ended nature and lack of coordination with efforts to right size the military and transform the broader defense sector and how this led the military to fragment during periods of heightened political competition Furthermore the book explains why integration ultimately failed in South Sudan and identifies the wider lessons that could be applied to current or future war to peace transitions This book will be of great interest to students of war and conflict studies peacebuilding post conflict reconstruction African security issues and International Relations in general as well as to practitioners Teaching Victorian Literature in the Twenty-First
