

A woman in a long, dark, flowing dress is running on a wooden pier towards the ocean. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a bright, hazy glow that silhouettes the woman. Her arms are outstretched, and her hair is blowing in the wind. The sky is a warm orange color, and the ocean is visible in the background. In the top left corner, there are some decorative orange and yellow leaves and berries.

network news's first African American correspondent when ABC News hired him in 1962. Raised in Homestead and Pittsburgh, he worked in the mills, graduated from the University of Pittsburgh, and went on to become a journalist for the Pittsburgh Courier and later for local radio. With his basso profundo voice resonating on the airwaves, Goode challenged the police, politicians, and segregation while providing Black listeners a voice that captured their experience. Race prevented him from breaking into television until Jackie Robinson dared ABC to give him a chance. Goode was uncompromising in his belief that network news needed Black voices and perspectives if it were to authentically reflect the nation's complexities. His success at ABC initiated the slow integration of network news. Goode's life and work are remarkable in their own right, but his struggles and achievements also speak to larger issues of American life and the African American experience.

First, Best Steven L. Reed, Fagan Harris, 2023-10-10 The first Black mayor of Montgomery, Alabama, shares his story of making his way in a world that wasn't built for him, drawing on his rich heritage as the son of a civil rights leader. As a proud son of a civil rights leader, Steven L. Reed grew up hearing stories about how his father integrated Montgomery lunch counters and took advice directly from Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Reverend Ralph Abernathy. However, it wasn't until Reed was in the fourth grade and received a death threat against his father that he began to understand more fully the importance of the lessons his father was trying to impart. At this pivotal moment, his father explained, "My job is to prepare you to be a cross bearer and not just a crown wearer. Bigotry has no place in our household. It will only hold you down and make you small." First Best is an essential antidote to the perpetual dehumanization and distortions of Black men in our culture and media. By sharing the story of forging his own path, Reed offers an alternative narrative to Black men coming of age, catalyzing their hope and sense of possibility. Although Reed took a circuitous path to the office of mayor that began by forging his identity at Morehouse College, pursuing entrepreneurship, and exploring the wider world and serving as a probate judge, each step was guided by the values of his father's generation. First Best is not just about assuming the mantle of manhood or leadership; nor is it only about the expectation of greatness. Fundamentally, it's about responsibility and preparation: serving others and being willing to pay the price of leadership by carrying the weight of each decision. First Best affirms the next generation of Black men and women by showing, through story and example, their power and potential in a world that doesn't always root for them.

The Black Woods Amy Godine, 2023-11-15 Winner of the Charles A. Weyerhaeuser Forest History Society Book Award, The Black Woods chronicles the history of Black pioneers in New York's northern wilderness. From the late 1840s to the 1860s, they migrated to the Adirondacks to build the farms that helped them meet a 250-acre property requirement imposed on Black New York voters in 1821. Abolitionist Gerrit Smith gifted 120,000 acres to 3,000 landless Black New Yorkers with the support of Frederick Douglass, John Brown, and other abolitionists. His prescient plan enacted affirmative action and distributive justice. But when most of his grantees did not move north, Smith's interest cooled. He would not visit Timbuctoo, Freeman's Home, or Blacksville. The settlers were on their own. In The Black Woods, Godine revives this history with stirring stories of frontier life.

and racial justice She puts the vote seeking Black pioneers at the heart of the Adirondack narrative At long last their shaping role has been reclaimed
