puisque je passais par là...

A painting of a tree with a split canopy, one side in warm autumn colors and the other in cool winter colors, standing in a body of water. The tree is positioned in the center, with its roots visible in the water. The left side of the canopy is painted in vibrant autumnal hues of orange, red, and yellow, while the right side is in cool winter tones of blue, white, and grey. The background is a split sky, with the left half showing a warm sunset or sunrise and the right half showing a cool, starry night sky. The water in the foreground is a mix of blue and white, reflecting the colors of the sky and the tree. The overall composition is a visual metaphor for the transition between seasons.
