Long-Term Care around the World Jonathan Gruber, Kathleen McGarry, 2025-05-14 A comparative analysis of both formal and informal long term care in ten of the world's wealthiest countries Nations throughout the world are in the midst of an enormous demographic transition with life expectancy increasing and fertility falling leading to a rapidly aging population and critical implications for long term care around the world This volume documents and compares long term care programs in ten wealthy countries Analyses of survey data and government statistics show that the costs of long term care are beyond the financial means of a large fraction of the elderly population in most countries particularly the oldest and most disabled As a result public systems bear most of the cost of formal long term care such as care in an institution or paid home care Most countries spend more on nursing homes than on home care but this relationship varies widely as does the mix of care needs and resources used to define eligibility for public funding At the same time most care is provided informally through family or unpaid caregivers The costs of informal care including the foregone earnings of caregivers are estimated to account for at least one third of all long term care spending in every country Thus any estimate of the social costs of long term care must account for the implicit costs of informal care

On Becoming a Teen Mom Mary Patrice Erdmans, Timothy Black, 2015-02-06 In 2013 New York City launched a public education campaign with posters of frowning or crying children saying such things as I'm twice as likely not to graduate high school because you had me as a teen and Honestly Mom chances are he won't stay with you Campaigns like this support a public narrative that portrays teen mothers as threatening the moral order bankrupting state coffers and causing high rates of poverty incarceration and school dropout These efforts demonize teen mothers but tell us nothing about their lives before they became pregnant In this myth shattering book the authors tell the life stories of 108 brown white and black teen mothers exposing the problems in their lives often overlooked in pregnancy prevention campaigns Some stories are tragic and painful marked by sexual abuse partner violence and school failure Others depict girl next door characters whose unintended pregnancies lay bare insidious gender disparities Offering a fresh perspective on the links between teen births and social inequalities this book demonstrates how the intersecting hierarchies of gender race and class shape the biographies of young mothers
