CORN CHRONICLES

THE JOURNEY FROM PLATE TO POOP

How the Digestive System Works

The digestive system is a complex network of organs that work together to break down food into nutrients that the body can use. It starts in the mouth, where food is chewed and mixed with saliva. The food then travels down the esophagus to the stomach, where it is broken down into smaller pieces. From the stomach, the food moves into the small intestine, where it is further broken down and nutrients are absorbed. The remaining waste moves into the large intestine, where water is absorbed and the waste is prepared for elimination.

Breaking Down is Hard to Do

One of the most important parts of the digestive system is the stomach. The stomach is a muscular organ that contracts and relaxes to mix food with stomach acid. This process is called peristalsis. The stomach acid helps to break down food into smaller pieces that can be absorbed by the small intestine.

Let's Process This

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for absorbing nutrients from the food. It is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. Each part has different functions and is lined with small, finger-like projections called villi that increase the surface area for absorption.
