Firstly, identifying suitable examples to support your thesis is crucial. It requires thorough research to find relevant instances that can effectively illustrate the causal connections you aim to explore. This demands not only time but also a keen analytical eye to select examples that align with the central theme of your essay.

Additionally, constructing a logical and coherent argument requires a deep understanding of the chosen examples. This process demands critical thinking and the ability to synthesize information to present a compelling case.

Structuring the essay also poses its own set of challenges. Organizing the content in a way that flows seamlessly, leading the reader through the causal chain, demands skill in articulating ideas. Proper introduction, well-defined body paragraphs, and a convincing conclusion are essential elements that require careful attention to detail.

Moreover, expressing ideas coherently and persuasively is paramount. Finding the right balance between providing enough detail to support your argument and avoiding unnecessary complexities can be tricky. It requires a mastery of language to convey your thoughts effectively.

Frederic Bartlett's description of the discourse processes of individuals, small groups, and large communities. Then she concentrates on reading and writing processes as they were variously perceived throughout the 1970s and 1980s. These cultural and cognitive avenues of investigation provide an essential starting point for her presentation of the late 20th century approaches to the generative, organizational, and selective nature of human communication. The work illustrates an integrative conception of discourse, placing cognitive activity in relation to the text while assuming a social orientation encompassing both composition and comprehension. It describes constructivist concepts in terms of their similarities and differences. It applies theoretical positions to case studies in reading and writing and presents conclusions useful to scholars working on issues of comprehension and communication.
