J. Mawson, 2005-08-25 Belief in God answers two questions what if anything is it that Jews Christians and Muslims are agreeing about when they join in claiming that there is a God and what if any prospects are there for rationally defending or attacking this claim In the context of a sustained argument for particular answers to these questions Tim Mawson tackles many of the most prominent topics in the philosophy of religion He argues that those who believe that there is a God are best interpreted as believing that there is a being who is essentially personal transcendent immanent omnipotent omniscient eternal perfectly free perfectly good and necessary and non essentially creator of the world and value revealer of Himself and offerer of everlasting life Having explored the meaning and consistency of this conception of God in the first half of the book Mawson goes on to consider whether or not belief or the absence of belief in such a God might be the sort of thing that does not rationally require argument and if not what the criteria for a good argument for or against such a God's existence might be Having established some criteria he uses them to evaluate specific arguments for and against the existence of such a God He looks at the Argument to Design the Cosmological Argument the Ontological Argument the Argument from Religious Experience the Argument from Apparent Miracles the Problem of Evil and Pascal's Wager Finally he explores the relation between faith and reason In the course of his argument Mawson makes striking new claims and defends or attacks established positions in new ways His conversational style lively wit and enlightening examples make Belief in God as pleasurable as it is instructive and thought provoking It makes an ideal text for beginning undergraduate courses and for anyone thinking about these most important of questions

No Such Thing as Society Andy McSmith,2010-09-16 The 1980s was the revolutionary decade of the twentieth century To look back in 1990 at the Britain of ten years earlier was to look into another country The changes were not superficial like the revolution in fashion and music that enlivened the 1960s nor were they quite as unsettling and joyless as the troubles of the 1970s And yet they were irreversible By the end of the decade society as a whole was wealthier money was easier to borrow there was less social upheaval less uncertainty about the future Perhaps the greatest transformation of the decade was that by 1990 the British lived in a new ideological universe where the defining conflict of the twentieth century between capitalism and socialism was over Thatcherism took the politics out of politics and created vast differences between rich and poor but no expectation that the existence of such gross inequalities was a problem that society or government could solve because as Mrs Thatcher said There is no such thing as society people must look to themselves first From the Falklands war and the miners strike to Bobby Sands and the Guildford Four from Diana and the New Romantics to Live Aid and the big bang from the Rubik's cube to the ZX Spectrum McSmith's brilliant narrative account uncovers the truth behind the decade that changed Britain forever

Reportage Drawing Louis Netter,2023-12-28 How does drawing shape the truth and our understanding of the visual world Why has the act of reportage drawing persisted and thrived in our ever changing media landscape This book offers a deep dive into the world of reportage drawing a world which is provocative mixed media transdisciplinary and immersed in the idiosyncratic vision of the artist Where the traditional orientation of reportage was on the communicative function of the image as a record of an event contemporary practitioners largely detached from commissioning structures of the 19th and 20th centuries now seek to capture more experiential qualities of place and choose locations which have highly personal and political significance Liberated from old conceptions of reportage drawing as objective and true artists today embrace subjectivity and are seeking a rich dialogue with their subjects using drawing to tell important stories about protest human migration war corporate capitalism and homelessness Louis Netter distinguishes contemporary reportage drawing from its historical function through a critical exploration of the aesthetic of the sketch the role of caricature and the nature of experience Featuring several prominent artists such as Jill Gibbon who secretly draws in arms fairs across Europe Phoebe Glockner who produces highly provocative mixed media work about violence against women in Mexico renowned reportage illustrator Gary Embury and French reportage artist Loup Blaster in addition to an exploration of the author's own work this book shows how the act of drawing can foster new insights about people places and political realities in often subtle and challenging ways Part of the Drawing In series this book opens up reportage drawing practice as a way of understanding our world in a deeper and more personal way
