Effects of the Subprime Crisis on the U.S. American Financial Reporting System Miriam Janzen, 2009-06-30

Inhaltsangabe

Introduction

The Subprime Crisis became noticeable first in the second half of 2006 when many subprime mortgage borrowers in the United States of America (U.S.) were no longer able to make their loan payments and securities linked to those mortgages that had been sold all over the world turned out to be often worth quite less and in general substantially more risky than market participants had expected. The crisis caused several major financial institutions and mortgage lenders to face substantial liquidity problems or even to file for bankruptcy and Governments to provide funding in order to limit further damage to the economy. As the market tried to figure out the problems underlying the crisis, financial reporting, especially regarding derecognition of financial assets, special purpose entities, and fair value measurement, became a matter of public concern. Consequently, the purpose of this work is to discuss these concerns in order to estimate whether and to what extent financial reporting might have contributed to the crisis and to present and assess the usefulness of actions taken by the U.S. Financial Reporting System in response to the crisis. In order to meet this objective, the second main chapter provides a brief description of how the housing boom and the subsequent crisis evolved. The information provided therein shall contribute to the reader's understanding with respect to the following passages and especially judgements made by the author regarding the role of financial reporting in the crisis. The third main chapter will describe the U.S. Financial Reporting System by providing basic information about U.S. institutions that authoritatively deal with the elements of the system, including their aims, basics about their work, and how they interact. The fourth main section of the paper will examine the relevant reporting concepts and disclosure requirements, provide suggestions for improvements, and assess concerns voiced by market participants with respect to financial reporting. Subsequently, the thesis will analyze and judge actions taken by authoritative institutions of the U.S. Financial Reporting Systems in response to the crisis. This thesis considered publications issued until December 10, 2008.
