Abstract: Individuals with intellectual disability (ID) are at an elevated risk for sexual abuse and exploitation. This review examines the prevalence of sexual abuse and exploitation among individuals with ID, the risk factors for sexual abuse and exploitation, and the consequences of sexual abuse and exploitation. The review also discusses the need for research on the prevention and treatment of sexual abuse and exploitation among individuals with ID.

The first stage of such research is coupled with a search for the best fit between the two models under study in the data. The data required for this initial step is more extensive, involving multiple changes in the two independent variables, and is the subject of an exchange rate study to be carried out in a future research project.
