As a result, the Commission has received a number of off-the-record comments from the public, which often have questioned the Commission's independence or the objectivity of the process. Although we recognize the concern that the public should have access to the information generated by the Commission, we believe that the Commission's independence and objectivity are essential to the Commission's ability to carry out its mandate.

However, some federal policymakers (and some state governments) argue that the states' right to regulate their own energy markets is a constitutional principle that should not be overridden by federal action.
