Poor quality of sexual and reproductive care SRC persists despite countries commitments to international conferences The challenges posed by the COVID 19 pandemic reversed trends in maternal and neonatal mortality and contraception rates increasing unmet family planning needs and gender based violence Evidence shows that midwifery care has made an essential contribution to the development of high quality services in maternal and childcare The introduction of midwifery professionals trained according to international standards and integrated into the health system can provide around 90% of primary health care for women and newborns including family planning These skilled professionals can save lives and improve the health and well being of women and newborn infants at a scale unmatched by other health interventions Evidence identified 56 outcomes improved by the full scope of midwifery The weight of sexual and reproductive health on general health and wellbeing has a greater impact on women particularly those that are neglected to receive high quality SRC Providing high quality SRC demands more humanized and integrated efficient and effective services with a greater emphasis on quality both from a technical perspective and from the user experience Despite all the efforts the quality of SRC is still a challenge globally research is needed to identify best practices addressing quality care tailored to individuals implementation of models of care that enhance both well being and safety optimization of physiological processes during childbirth as well as validation of outcomes measures Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists ,1966-04 The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists is the premier public resource on scientific and technological developments that impact global security Founded by Manhattan Project Scientists the Bulletin s iconic Doomsday Clock stimulates solutions for a safer world
