Distributive Justice and Inequality Wulf Gaertner, Prasanta K. Pattanaik, 2013-11-11 From May 20 to May 24 1986 a conference on distributive justice and in equality was held at the Institute for Advanced Study Berlin Wissenschaftskolleg zu Berlin More than thirty scholars participated in this conference The topics of the presentations ranged from ethics welfare economics and social choice theory to characterizations of inequality measures and redistributive taxation schemes This book contains a selection of the papers given at the conference This collection of articles also appeared as issues 2 and 3 of volume 5 of Social Choice and Welfare In the first paper P Suppes argues for a pluralistic concept of equity For too long the emphasis has been on income distribution but there are other characteristics which are important when one talks about equity Suppes suggests that it would be desirable to have Lorenz curves for a variety of features of societies such as education health and housing P Dasgupta studies the quality of lives in terms of an index of living standards One has to distinguish between same number choices the number of lives is given and different numbers choices problem of optimum population The author argues that in the latter case the anonymity or symmetry axiom cannot be readily defended Once it is dropped however an incoherence in the moral ordering of possible worlds arises The moral basis for different numbers choices becomes generation dependent an overall moral ordering of possible worlds no longer exists
