By claiming that it does not necessarily belong to any one mind in particular is inferring then that the self is not in fact a property. Then how can it be said to exist? Thomas Reid (Macquarie, lecture 17) also raises an important objection to Locke's theory of personal identity that seems fairly self-evident to me. We can consider a man as: a child, then in middle age and at old age. If the man in middle age can remember occurrences when he was a young boy, but now that he is an old man can't, then can he be considered a different person from the young boy?

Of Personal Identity Hume

According to Locke the old man is the same as the middle aged one, and the middle aged is the same as the child. Yet there is no continuity of consciousness between the three, any break in memory would render them a 'non-person' if we follow Locke's argument-clearly it is logically inconsistent. David Hume's 'bundle theory' of the self seems to me rather more logically coherent. He claimed that humans tend to think of themselves as the same person as they were, say, 10 years ago; that we believed that although one had evolved over the period in a number of ways that the self had endured.

According to Hume however, this was a mistake, and when examined empirically no more than a practical habit: "I never can catch myself at any time without a perception, and never observe anything but the perception"(TI, vi, p. 251). It is clear, posits Hume, our thoughts and perceptions flow from one idea to the next; so we encounter a 'bundle', or grouping, of perceptions throughout our life but no actual continuous and enduring underlying self- or "I" -as a 'unity of consciousness'.

While there is a stability of perceptions over the short term, and some loose association of experiences, there is no overarching continuity of "I" in reality. Hume agrees that we extend over time in actions, we begin a job and finish it some time later, and that our desires also extend in some sort of continuity over time. Furthermore our physical bodies endure reasonably consistently; we age gradually. This according to Hume is what ultimately defines our sense of personal identity. While Hume's theory of the self is attractive in my view, if anything it doesn't go far

The Oxford Handbook of Identities in Organizations Andrew D. Brown,2020-01-16 Conceived as the meanings that individuals attach to their selves a substantial stockpile of theory related to identities accumulated across the arts social sciences and humanities over many decades continues to nourish contemporary research on self identities in organizations In times which are more reflexive narcissistic and fluid the identities of participants in organizations are increasingly less fixed and less certain making identity issues both more salient and more interesting Particular attention has been given to processes of identity construction often styled identity work Research has focused on how why and when such processes occur and their implications for organizing and individual group and organizational outcomes This has resulted in a burgeoning stream of research from discursive dramaturgical symbolic socio cognitive and psychodynamic perspectives that most often casts individuals efforts to fabricate identities as intentional relational and consequential Seemingly intractable debates centred on the nature of identities their relative stability or fluidity whether they are best regarded as coherent or fractured positive or not and how they are fabricated within relations of power combined with other conceptual issues continue to invigorate the field However these debates have also led to some scepticism regarding the future potential of identities research Yet as the chapters in this

Handbook demonstrate there are considerable grounds for optimism that identity as root metaphor nexus concept and means to bridge levels of analysis has significant potential to generate multiple compelling streams of theorizing in organization and management studies

Turkey and the European Union Selcen Öner, 2011-02-16 European identity has always been in a state of construction With the creation of the European Union however this construction now takes place within an institutional framework introducing a number of new variables Selcen Öner's Turkey and the European Union The Question of European Identity is an in depth analysis of the influence of these two entities on each others identity as Europeans in a society of increasing social political and cultural connectedness The mutual influence between Turks and Europeans gained significant momentum in 1999 when the European Union granted official candidate status to Turkey at that year's Helsinki Summit Turkey's Europeanness is still being debated despite the official stance that fulfilling the Copenhagen criteria and adopting the EU acquis are enough for being a full member of the EU These debates have even lead to arguments between political elites of the European Union about their privileged partnership with Turkey When comparing the attitudes of the European Union towards Turkey versus those towards Central and Eastern Europe one could argue that that return to Europe discourse has accelerated the membership of the latter but not the former Currently Turkey is neither considered an other nor a member of the family Rather Turkey is commonly relegated to the role of crucial neighbor or strategic partner by the political elites of the EU Öner's study analyzes a series of interviews conducted with several members of the European Parliament and sheds serious light on the fact that discussions on Turkey's membership in terms of her Europeanness reveal countless ambiguities in defining European identity It is clear that there is no common understanding or definition of European identity even amongst political leaders in the EU who challenge Turkey's authenticity as a member of European society Thus Selcen Öner's Turkey and the European Union The Question of European Identity argues that the position of Turkey vis vi
