Voluntary Disclosure of Company Information - Costly Additions or a step towards Competitive Advantage? Patrick Roy,2001-12-12 Abstract In a first step this ERP derives the theoretical necessity to provide voluntary strategic and non financial Information It is argued that companies are an integral part of a common environment and society acting in a framework of interdependent relationships A company is more and more seen as a community of interests of different groups and it can only act in an optimal way if the demands of all groups are taken into account and its behaviour is adjusted accordingly In this context interest groups demands for company Information depend an the possibilities of improvements in decision making or monitoring that arise with its use which in turn is mainly determined by the potential of Information to reduce uncertainty in the areas of interest For external decision makers uncertainty often arises from sources about which conservative company statements provide little insight Due to the traditional finance oriented concept of disclosure this is particularly true for strategic and non financial aspects Related additional Information that is voluntarily provided can considerably reduce uncertainty even more so as part of audited statements Conventional financial reporting and existing disclosure requirements will generally not nearly satisfy those information needs of user groups Any economic action though should only be taken if related benefits are exceeding related costs This priority of economicalness also holds for companies production processing and disclosure of Information Therefore it is necessary to consider as detailed as possible potential opportunities and disadvantages for voluntarily disclosing company Information both an and outside capital markets This is done in a second major part of the present work First voluntary disclosure can potentially affect share prices and thereby the market value of the firm markets not being strong form efficient So by giving company Information a higher market value can directly be induced thereby potentially lowering the cost of capital which for example improves the company s competitive position in the battle for cheap additional financing

Management Control Fredrik Nilsson,Anna-Karin Stockenstrand,2015-02-20 This book is about financial accounting and management control and how these two information systems are related as well as how their objectives conflict At the most fundamental level the objective of financial accounting is to provide owners and funders with comparable information on a company s value creation The aim of management control on the other hand is to give the board senior executives and employees unique information for strategy formulation and implementation One often mentioned negative effect is the risk of financial accounting affecting management control design and use making it less relevant for decision making at the company level The book provides an analysis of the complex relationship between financial accounting and management control The analysis is based on theoretical reasoning as well as several examples of how financial accounting standards affect not only the annual report but also the control system An interesting and perhaps unexpected conclusion is that management control seems to affect financial accounting almost as much as financial accounting affects management control These complex relationships which can influence the design and use of both financial accounting and management control are discussed in detail in this book Panduan Komperehensif Akuntansi dan Keuangan: Menguasai Dasar-Dasar
