Kimmins, 2004 Forecasting Forest Futures Hamish Kimmins, Kim Scoullar, Brad Seely, Juan A. Blanco, Clive Welham, 2010 Modelling is an important tool for understanding the complexity of forest ecosystems and the variety of interactions of ecosystem components processes and values This book describes the hybrid approach to modelling forest ecosystems and their possible response to natural and management induced disturbance The book describes the FORECAST family of ecosystem management models at three different spatial scales tree stand and landscape and compares them with alternative models at these three spatial scales The book will help forest managers to understand what to expect from ecosystem based forest models serve as a tool for use in teaching about sustainability scenario analysis and value trade offs in natural resources management and assist policy makers managers and researches working in assessment of sustainable forest management and ecosystem management Several real life examples of using the FORECAST family of models in forest management and other applications are presented from countries including Canada China Spain and the USA to illustrate the concepts described in the text The book also demonstrates how these models can be extended for scenario and value trade off analysis through visualization and educational or management games Refuge Manual, 1981 CWE, 1998 The Productivity and Sustainability of Southern Forest Ecosystems in a Changing Environment Robert Mickler, Susan Fox, 2012-12-06 In conclusion current year first flush foliage of branches grown in 525 d 1 1 and 700 J Lll I of carbon dioxide had much greater rates of Pm ax compared to the P max of foliage grown in 350 J Lll I carbon dioxide These findings are similar to other long term field studies with loblolly pine Teskey 1995 Murthy 1995 Elevated carbon dioxide concentration was also significantly affected the G max however higher rates were only found at the 525 J Ll 1 I carbon dioxide con centration Generally the total chlorophyll content decreased as the carbon dioxide concentration was increased The data presented here represent first year responses to the carbon dioxide and cultural treatments This experiment will continue to determine whether increased maximum net photosynthetic rate resulting from elevated carbon dioxide will persist over the life of the foliage and over an anticipated greater range of moisture and nutrient availability than existed during the first year of the study In addition to this determination evidence will also be collected to test for the possibility of downward acclimation of photosynthesis by foliage exposed to long term elevated carbon dioxide concentrations Detailed phenology measurements of branches and whole trees are expected to further the knowledge of how loblolly pine trees growing at the edge of the natural range respond to variations in carbon dioxide concentration water and nutrient supply
