Trends and patterns in air traffic

According to World Bank data:

- In 1970, the number of world air transport passengers was fewer than 0.5 billion and the UK's share lower than 20 million.
- As the number of airports and aircraft has increased, so have passenger numbers. By 2015, the number for the world was nearly 3.5 billion and for the UK was more than 130 million.
- A number of NEE countries have built impressive large airports such as Shanghai and Hong Kong in China, Singapore, and Dubai in the United Arab Emirates (UAE).
- Patterns have been affected by the 2008 economic recession and because the latest generation of aircraft are larger and more fuel-efficient.

What has brought about the increasing popularity and attendant normalization of factory farms across many parts of the world? What are some of the ways to resist such broad convergences in meat production and how successful are they? This book locates the answers to these questions at the intersection between the culture, science, and political economy of meat production and consumption. It details how and why techniques of production have spread across the world, albeit in a spatially uneven way. It argues that the modern meat production and consumption sphere is the outcome of a complex matrix of cultural, politics, economics, and technological faith. Drawing from examples across the world, including America, Europe, and Asia, the tensions and repercussions of meat production and consumption are also analyzed. From a geographical perspective, food animals have been given considerably less attention compared to wild animals or pets. This book, framed conceptually by critical animal studies, governmentality, and commodification, is a theoretically driven and empirically rich study that advances the study of food animals in geography as
