

impact of Poverty on Children and Families

Introduction

In this paper I evaluate the impact of poverty on children and families and the ways in which a community can help change these conditions of marginalization. As of 2014 there are 14.7 million poor children in the United States, which is “the second highest child poverty rate among 35 industrialized countries despite having the largest economy in the world” (Children’s Defense Fund, 2015). This means that there are 14.7 million children in the US who have increased risk of experiencing health problems, hunger and poor nutrition, developmental delays, psychological problems and educational underachievement (Rafferty & Shinn, 1991). The patterns of poverty are passed down through generations and will not be broken until they have the opportunity to be healthy, educated and skilled enough to participate in the decisions that affect their lives (Peirson, 2010). It is our job as a community to recognize this injustice and work in solidarity with these families in poverty to stop this cycle and help the children of our future succeed.

Children need structure, predictability and consistency in their lives yet moving between shelters and unpredictable living situations is not congruent with those needs (Kilmer, Cook, Crusto, Strater & Haber, 2012). Children and their families lack choice and opportunity to find appropriate shelter and resources mostly due to lack of affordable housing, racial disparities, the challenges of being a single parent and encountering trauma such as domestic violence (America’s Youngest Outcasts). When we treat these families at an individual level we are just scratching the surface of all these
