Prefabricated Construction for Sustainability and Mass Customization ,2024-03-13 Building is a system of energy and environment which needs to accommodate diverse needs and demands at individual and societal levels Nearly 40% of global energy use derives from construction In fact a house consumes a significant amount of energy before and after occupancy and the associated CO2 emissions are contributing to climate change Prefabrication is a means to mass produce buildings or parts and components Thus in theory production costs can be reduced through economies of scale In the 1920s the significance of mass produced houses was widely propagated by Le Corbusier who saw standardization as fundamental to mass production. Nonetheless today in response to growing global warming issues and the constant increase in energy prices the construction industry is becoming more responsive to the delivery of sustainable architecture than ever. Within this context sustainability may embrace not only building economy but also the adequacy beyond the legitimacy in which the quality barely coincides with individuals' various dynamic needs, desires and expectations today. In this respect mass produced prefabs alone fail to realize total sustainability. In 1987 a paradoxical concept of mass customization was introduced by Stanley Davis. Nonetheless the idea applied to housing dates back to the 1950s. The essence of mass customizable architecture was speculated by Walter Gropius as he emphasized the need for standardizing and mass producing not only entire buildings but also their components. The combination of standard building components which can be prefabricated results in mass producing various types of constructions through economies of scope where the quality can be defined by user choices of the components given in consideration of economic constraints and needs and demands. This book is an initial attempt to integrate the two notions of sustainability and mass customization by reviewing the potential capacities of prefabricated construction.

Becoming a Sustainable Organization Kristina Kohl, 2016-04-21 Organizations find that a performance gap exists between sustainability vision and benefits realization. Effecting transformational change requires incorporating sustainability into organization's culture including policies, processes and people. Although they are often overlooked, project management professionals and HR professionals are valuable.

Change Management Towards Life Cycle AE(C) Practice Anna Dalla Valle, 2021-03-15 The book explores how architectural engineering and construction AEC firms have been adapting and changing to effectively address key environmental challenges focusing on Life Cycle Thinking and related methodologies: Life Cycle Assessments and Life Cycle Costing. Starting from current practice the book outlines the necessary change management to turn into life cycle AE/C practice, switching from a product technology mindset to a life cycle thinking and holistic approach. Although the primary audience of the book are Architectural and Engineering firms, the broad range of topics encourages readers from different backgrounds to explore the latest advancements in construction sector. Service companies and software developers can find inspiration to develop innovative tools and solutions; clients can find ways to demand sustainability as key target for building design; and universities can align academic programmes to address new industry challenges.
