Les supercheries littéraires dévoilées Joseph Marie Quérard,1847 Les supercheries littéraires dévoilées, galerie des auteurs apocryphes, supposés, déguisés, plagiaires, et des éditeurs infidèles, de la littérature française Joseph Marie Quérard,1847 Les Supercheries Littéraires Dévoilées Joseph Marie Quérard,1847 Dostoevsky Joseph Frank,2020-03-31 Volume three of one of the greatest literary biographies of our time Joseph Frank's award winning five volume Dostoevsky is widely recognized as the best biography of the Russian novelist in any language and one of the greatest literary biographies ever written In this monumental work Frank blends biography intellectual history and literary criticism to illuminate Dostoevsky's works and set them in their personal historical and ideological context More than a biography in the usual sense this is a cultural history of nineteenth century Russia providing both a rich picture of the world in which Dostoevsky lived and a major reinterpretation of his life and work This volume begins with the writer's return to Saint Petersburg after a ten year Siberian exile and traces how his engagement in the cultural and social ferment of Russia in the early 1860s led to his discovery of the themes that would underlie his mature masterpieces Les supercheries littéraires dévoilées galerie des auteurs ... de la littérature française pendant les quatre derniers siècles ... par J.-M. Quérard ,1847

Zones of Anxiety Vicki Callahan,2005-01-10 A feminist analysis of the cinema of uncertainty through an examination of the crime serials of Louis Feuillade and the work of actress Musidora The crime serials by French filmmaker Louis Feuillade provide a unique point of departure for film studies presenting modes rarely examined within early cinematic paradigms Made during 1913 to 1920 the series of six films share not only a consistency of narrative structure and style but also a progressive revelation of the criminal threat a dislocation of both cinematic and ideological subjectivity as it shifts realms of social cultural and aesthetic disturbance Feuillade's work raises significant questions of cinema authorship film history and film aesthetics all of which are examined in Vicki Callahan's groundbreaking work Zones of Anxiety the first study to address the crime serials of Louis Feuillade from a feminist perspective Zones of Anxiety merges cultural history and feminist film theory arguing for a different kind of film history a poetic history that is shaped by the little examined cinematic mode of uncertainty Often obscured by film technique and film historians this quality of uncertainty endemic to the cinema comes in part from the formal structures of repetition and recursion found in Feuillade's serials. However, Callahan argues that uncertainty is also found in the poetic body of the actress Musidora who is featured in two of the serials. It is the mobility of the Musidora figure socially, culturally, sexually, and textually that makes her a powerful image and also a place to view the historical blind spots of film studies and feminist studies with regard to questions of race, class, and sexuality. Callahan's substantial focus on archival research builds a foundation for a host of compelling arguments for a new feminist history of film. Other studies have touched on the issue of gender in early cinema, though until now neither Feuillade's work nor French silent film have been examined in light of feminist film theory and history. Zones of Anxiety opens up the possibility of alternate readings in film studies, illuminating our understanding of subjectivity and situating a spectatorship that acknowledges social and cultural differences.
