WASHINGTON POST Class in Turn-of-the-Century Novels of Gissing, James, Hardy and Wells Christine DeVine, 2017-11-30 This book argues that due to political and ideological shifts in the last decades of the nineteenth century a time when the class system in England was in a state of flux a new depiction of social class was possible in the English novel Late century writers such as Gissing James Hardy and Wells question the middle class Victorian views of class that had dominated the novel for decades By disrupting traditional novelistic conventions these writers reveal the ideology of the historical moment in which those conventions obtained thereby questioning the naturalness of class assumed by earlier middle class Victorian writers The book contextualizes novels by these writers within their historical moment with reference to relevant maps journalism artwork or photography and specific historical events It illuminates the relationship between fiction and history in late nineteenth and early twentieth century fiction and especially the relationship between changing depictions of class and the development of realism Examining the nineteenth century English novel through the lens of social class allows the twenty first century critic and student not only to understand the issues at stake in much Victorian fiction but also to recognize powerful present day vestiges of this social class system Opposite Neighbours: a Novel Neighbours, 1863 Working Girls Katherine Mullin, 2016 Working Girls offers a cultural and literary history of telegraphists typists shop girls and barmaids It argues that these occupations helped to shape a distinctively new identity for emancipated young women and explores how authors used this to navigate a precarious literary landscape
