Kidneys are the "filters" of the excretory system. They control essential balance between body salts and water. They remove from the blood nitrogenous wastes, water, urea, nonvolatile foreign substances, excess salt and excess water. The kidney is enclosed by a connective tissue capsule and is divided into an outer cortex and an inner medulla. The Loop of Henle functions chiefly for water resorption. The liquid waste, urine, collected by the kidneys passes through the ureter to the urinary bladder. Urinary bladder is a strong muscular organ that stores the urine until it can be excreted via the urethra.

Animal Models for the Study of Human Disease Rita I. Jabr,Christopher H. Fry,2013-05-29 The function of the lower urinary tract is to store urine and periodically expel its contents through a reciprocal control of the contractile properties of the urinary bladder and its outflow tract The decision to switch from storage to voiding modes depends upon integrating in the central nervous system sensory information from the bladder and controlling lower urinary tract function from the sacral spinal cord Pathological or congenital alterations to any stage of this process can induce a combination of symptoms that include urgency and frequency leakage of urine or pain Animal models can be generated to characterise different stages of this complex control process to understand the particular biological defects that can lead to these pathologies This chapter will address a number of lower urinary tract pathologies and how animal models can help in understanding them *Kidney
