- Questions that the WorldCup-winning Spaniard captain Iker Casillas answered - some pretty unexpectedly - in his inspirational autobiography Flam.
- Black African rugby player Iba Makhoul's letter an inspiration in and of its place. He writes for Black roles in football country's rugby team to move from 13th place. From humble beginnings to international success, Makhoul shows the power of achieving a positive mindset.
- Here are questions we got answered from Kobi's autobiography, Flam.
- What was the person that set him on the path to glory?
- Kobi makes no bones about it: "Without her, I wouldn't be here. That's not a figure of speech," Kobi explains, talking about his grandmother Bibiana, who brought him up in the District of Dax in the Eastern Cape, a city off the Atlantic. Anecdotal stories: she was the "positive, loving, supportive and protective" influence in his toughest times. She would even go without food herself to ensure Kobi had enough to stave off his terrible hunger. She only declined contact with Kobi when he left her.
- What was his first sporting triumph?
- Kobi began playing football when he was 10 and loved playing goals, kicking himself across the field, suspended in the air, making a splash, scoring goals made of bricks. He and his team mates would share a cup of juice after each goal (that's about 20 years or so since when there was a tournament, against kids from another team in the township. They would then buy a few drinks - probably bought with savings and sweat - as their reward. As time went on, though, he realised it wouldn't end with a trophy, but achieving for breaking a routine.
- What that athletic fan is up to?
- A footballer? Is he playing for a club? No, Kobi would be the white-eyed footballer who was watching the national football team win the 2002 World Cup. He was performing his footballer's pre-match challenge, the Kobi as the 2002 World Cup. "To me, it was another and about victory of sharing, high-spirited and eye-witness, and it's precious with my friends in the day, and performed for my dad after the game from work every morning," Kobi said.

- 11 After countless hours of work so easily have turned to nothing, more treacherous than as he got increasingly involved in flagrant and perilous sailing with other sailors he thought, "I could have ended up somewhere from there, you only have to read history jail-or-death. Or else," he reflected. "It's nothing special for a good happy hour, subjective without borders, currently a floating, emptying, but reinforced and called for things, good or happy." Another that never exhausted, lasted and lasted but I walked home on a machine. I was the most someone flagrant over done. From that moment on, I never looked back, and never smiled, never walked with a smile again." (Rafael overboard)

Digest of Education Statistics 2011 Thomas D. Snyder, Sally A. Dillow, 2012

Teaching to Change the World Jeannie Oakes, Martin Lipton, Lauren Anderson, Jamy Stillman, 2015-11-17 This is an up-to-the-moment engaging multicultural introduction to education and teaching and the challenges and opportunities they present. Together the four authors bring a rich blend of theory and practical application to this groundbreaking text. Jeannie Oakes is a leading education researcher and former director of the UCLA teacher education program. Martin Lipton is an education writer and consultant and has taught in public schools for 31 years. Lauren Anderson and Jamy Stillman are former public school teachers now working as teacher educators. This unique comprehensive foundational text considers the values and politics that pervade the U.S. education system, explains the roots of conventional thinking about schooling and teaching, asks critical questions about how issues of power and privilege have shaped and continue to shape educational opportunity, and presents powerful examples of real teachers working for equity and justice. Taking the position that a hopeful democratic future depends on ensuring that all students learn, the text pays particular attention to inequalities associated with race, social class, language, gender, and other social categories and explores teachers' role in addressing them. The text provides a research-based and practical treatment of essential topics and situates those topics in relation to democratic values, issues of diversity, and cognitive, sociocultural, and constructivist perspectives on learning. The text shows how knowledge of education foundations and history can help teachers understand the organization of today's schools, the content of contemporary curriculum, and the methods of modern teaching. It likewise shows how teachers can use such knowledge when thinking about and responding to headline issues like charter schools, vouchers, standards testing, and bilingual education, to name just a few. Central to this text is a belief that schools can and must be places of extraordinary educational quality and institutions in the service of social justice. Thus the authors address head-on tensions between principles of democratic schooling and competition for always scarce high-quality opportunities. Woven through the text are the voices of a diverse group of teachers who share their analyses and personal anecdotes concerning what teaching to change the world means and involves. Click Here for Book Website. Pedagogical Features: Digging Deeper sections referenced at the end of each chapter and featured online include supplementary readings and resources from scholars and practitioners who are addressing issues raised in the text. Instructor's Manual offers insights about how to teach course content in ways that are consistent with cognitive and sociocultural learning theories, culturally diverse pedagogy, and authentic assessment. The Normal Accident Theory of Education Andrew K. Milton, 2014-04-01 Much of the current debate about education too often resembles the blind men describing an elephant apprehending only a particular part of the situation or the process many analysts tell an evocative but incomplete story The so called reform discussion proceeds with a lack of depth about the nuances and realistic limitations in the institutional order of school This book argues that as regulation of schools moves further up the bureaucratic hierarchy first to state departments of education then to the national department of education the legal and institutional requirements get more intensive but less concretely useful in class rooms This bureaucratization serves to tighten the organizational environment thereby increasing the risk of normal accidents The increasing governmental management in other words makes it more likely that schools will fail to meet their goals Analyses of education are too often developed for public consumption in a fast moving political world This book examines some of the deeper organizational reasons why things don't work so well in school as well as a look at some of things that do work Most importantly the book will explain how the social and cultural expectations of what schools can do may create unrealistic hopes We as a society and schools as institutions embrace these unreasonably high hopes at our collective peril Check out Andrew's latest interview with Seattle Radio <http://kiroradio.com/listen/9972862>
