

Responding to mis- and disinformation through communication-led interventions

Chapter 6 analyses how governments' public communication functions can contribute to responding to the evolving challenge of mis- and disinformation. It reviews countries' efforts to institutionalise interventions, notably through the creation of official guidance, training and evaluation, and the role of intra- and inter-governmental co-operation. The chapter highlights that:

- The outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic has brought new urgency to the challenges posed by the spread of mis- and disinformation. Notably, only 38% of CoGs and 21% of MR respondents had a guiding document in place to govern the response to mis- and disinformation at the outset of the crisis. This indicates that they may have been inadequately prepared to face the wave of health misinformation that accompanied COVID-19.
- Strengthening communicators' understanding of how to counter mis- and disinformation and establishing consistent practices can help identify a path forward and stay ahead of emerging media and technology trends. Identifying successes and lessons from responses initially established to counter misinformation about COVID-19 will also be a useful approach.
- OECD data suggests that there is scope to strengthen the evaluation of governments' responses to disinformation. Through the regular evaluation of counter-disinformation activities, governments can build evidence of what works and what does not. This research, alongside a focus on training public communicators on proven approaches, are important avenues for future activities.
- The complex and cross-cutting challenges posed by mis- and disinformation highlight the importance of co-ordination across and between governments, as well as with external stakeholders. Overall, co-ordination was widespread across surveyed countries, with 86% reporting co-ordination between CoG and ministries, agencies, or departments, and 72% of CoGs surveyed engaging with actors outside of government on topics related to disinformation. Nevertheless, given that the majority of countries that co-ordinated externally did so on an ad-hoc basis, there may be scope to continue to formalise and regularise such engagement.
- Governments should view the public communication function as part of a wider set of actions to tackle this problem. Efforts to strengthen the media and information ecosystem through media literacy, regulatory responses, initiatives to strengthen independent, local and fact-based journalism, and additional research on what works, among others, will help ensure public communication can play an effective role in governments' holistic responses to these challenges.

Applying communication for openness and improved public policies and services

Chapter 7 analyses the contribution of public communication to improved policies and services as well as to the open government principles. It illustrates practical ways in which this function can be implemented to meet a range of policy goals and support transparency, integrity, accountability and citizen participation. The chapter notes that:
