

CUNEiform

Write Like a Sumerian!

Cuneiform is noted as the oldest form of writing, systems were developed in Mesopotamia as a method of communication. Cuneiform included a combination of pictographs, symbols representing entire words and phonograms (symbols representing a syllable or sound). Early Sumerian writing began as a pictographic system with simple pictures and symbols, which represented a whole word or idea. Sumerians developed pictures of objects and animals to represent the words for those objects and animals. Sumerian Cuneiform symbols include geometric shapes, lines, dots, and wavy lines. Sumerian words such as writing and working were represented with abstract symbols. This was a revolutionary development because it allowed a more sophisticated writing system to be developed. The evolution of the phonetic system of writing provided a more abstract idea, symbols represented sounds, instead of whole ideas. The symbol for water could be used to represent the word "water" because the two words sounded alike. This is the same concept as the alphabet used today. The Cuneiform system of writing developed over a period of 100 years and eventually died. Although symbols by themselves, the Sumerians had developed a complete system of writing.

Cuneiform was used when carved into clay tablets with fluted reeds. Some fluted reeds were used to create the symbols or they were inscribed in pictures. Many of the clay tablets found by archaeologists were broken or damaged because they were so brittle when building that they would shatter.

Simple words and phrases were carved into the clay tablets to record the words. Some of the earliest Sumerian tablets were carved on a stone for the use of writing.
