- Discontinuous growth indicates the presence of apical meristems in the shoot and root tips of vascular plants. These meristems are regions of undifferentiated cells. This compartment can generate many more cells and cause the shoot and root to grow. In addition, within principal meristems are smaller submeristems that produce secondary meristems that produce secondary growth (thickening of the stem and roots).
- Primary meristems are apical meristems and are located at the shoot and root tips of vascular plants. They are the main source of new cells for the shoot and root.
- Secondary meristems, generally located in vascular tissue, are actively expanding meristems in vascular tissue that contribute to secondary growth and thickening of the shoot and root. They are located in vascular tissue and are responsible for secondary growth. This growth is responsible for thickening of the shoot and root.

Other chapters provide an early look at the importance of the family as a primary socialization agent, the importance of gender socialization, and the importance of social class, race, and ethnicity in the socialization process. The book also includes chapters on the socialization of children with special needs, the socialization of children in the digital age, and the socialization of children in the global context.

32. Although not the largest in size, Germany's small size (the largest reported was Japan) helped it to sell its gas turbines to governments, who wanted to purchase the turbines for their large military ships.
33. The gas turbine was a good fit for the ship because it could be installed "underneath" the hull, reducing resistance.
34. Although the turbine could not easily be "cleaned" there, it did not require that service and operators could
35. Repair was done on dry dock and the engine was "clean" already (ready for reuse).
36. When the maintenance (cleaning) happened, the ship could be ready for a government request to visit other ports.
