- Researcher has a null-hypothesis
- They prove their null-hypothesis from the binary assumption of normality, when the data is not normally distributed, and therefore it's not enough. The researcher thought this step.
- Therefore, a non-normality test is used. The statistic is the Kolmogorov-Smirnov test, and the result shows

It is important to understand that the purpose of this study is to identify factors that affect the "effectiveness" of the program. The study does not intend to determine whether the program is effective or not. The study is a pilot study and is not a final evaluation.
