

Some key features of academic reports

Please note! This handout describes and models general features of academic reports. It is very likely that in your specific discipline only some of these features will apply – and there may be other requirements not included here. Departmental requirements for reports especially vary widely, so please do check your course or unit handbook, or ask a subject tutor or lecturer.

Reports, along with essays, are one of the most common types of written assignment on university courses. (For more on the differences between reports and essays please see the handout Reports and essays: key differences.)

There is no absolutely right way to structure a report – the structure depends on the purpose. In general, however, academic reports feature some of the following sections:

1 Title page

2 Author declaration

This is a simple form, usually available from your department or faculty office, which you have to sign and include with any report (or indeed essay) written for your course. It confirms formally that the assignment submitted is entirely your own work.

3 Abstract (sometimes called Executive Summary)

An abstract is a short (often around 150 words in length) summary of the whole report. It should therefore be written last. Unlike a conclusion, the abstract needs to include a brief overview of all the stages of the report, not just the results. (One purpose of an abstract is to give just enough information to enable a prospective reader to judge whether they need to read the full report.)

Hint: If you are new to writing abstracts, one approach is to write, in order, one or two sentences to represent each of the sections of your report. Have a look at abstracts or executive summaries in reports in the Library or on the Internet to get an idea of the style in which they are generally written.

4 Acknowledgements

This is a separate page acknowledging the support of those people who have contributed to the assignment. An acknowledgements page is normally necessary only in major reports.

Stock-taking report: food biotechnology communication materials in the world Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-10-27 During the Global Community Meeting on the FAO GM Foods Platform held in September 2019 many participants expressed the strong need for a set of impartial and science based communication materials that would address the communication challenges at a national level around food biotechnologies To address this need FAO in collaboration with Kenya's National Biosafety Authority and scientific and consumer education communication experts initiated the process of developing a communication toolkit on food biotechnologies The toolkit is to be used by governmental agencies that assess the safety of foods derived from biotechnologies to better communicate with the general public The toolkit will contain a series of guiding documents with various sample materials The target users of the toolkit itself are the food safety and biosafety competent authorities in the government sector whereas the sample materials are for the general public A step by step approach has been planned to develop the sample materials with the first steps being the analysis of existing consumer education and communication materials worldwide the identification of gaps in the information that is needed for consumers to gain a better understanding and the selection of consumer education and communication materials to be used as a basis to develop sample materials This document summarizes these initial steps Scientific Method Randall K. Noon, 2009-04-27 Most failure or accident investigations begin at the end of the story after the explosion after the fire has been extinguished or after the collapse In many instances information about the last event and the starting event is known reasonably well Information about what occurred between these endpoints however is often unclear confusing and perhaps contradictory Scientific Method Applications in Failure Investigation and Forensic Science explains how scientific investigative methods can best be used to determine why and how a particular event occurred While employing examples from forensic engineering the book uses principles and ideas applicable to most of the forensic sciences The author examines the role of the failure investigator describes the fundamental method for investigation discusses the optimal way to organize evidence and explores the four most common reasons why some investigations fail The book provides three case studies that exemplify proper report writing contains a special chapter profiling a criminal case by noted forensic specialist Jon J Nordby and offers a reading list of resources for further study Concise and illustrative this volume demonstrates how the scientific method can be applied to failure investigation in ways that avoid flawed reasoning while delivering convincing reconstruction scenarios Investigators can pinpoint where things went wrong providing valuable information that can prevent another catastrophe
