

TIMELINE HISTORY OF OIL & GAS ACCOUNTING CHANGES

1980 - CURRENT

1980

Successful Efforts

The Accounting Standards Board (ASB) adopted the successful efforts approach, reflecting a view that oil and gas companies should be treated as operating companies, not as producers of a commodity. The ASB was established in 1973 and replaced the former AICPA Committee on Accounting Principles.

Full-Cost Method

Due to issues regarding the full-cost method, the ASB issued a new standard, the full-cost method, which required oil and gas companies to expense all costs incurred in the production of oil and gas, including exploration, development, and production costs. This method was intended to provide a more accurate picture of the costs of oil and gas production.

1982

SEC Claims Revisited

In 1982, the SEC revisited its 1970 decision regarding the full-cost method. The SEC found that the full-cost method was not in the best interests of investors and required oil and gas companies to use the successful efforts method.

1983

SEC Passes Revenue Recognition Standard

In 1983, the SEC passed a revenue recognition standard, which required oil and gas companies to recognize revenue from the sale of oil and gas only when the sale is complete. This standard was intended to prevent oil and gas companies from recognizing revenue prematurely, which could lead to an overstatement of earnings.

1984

Introduction of SF Requirements, Interpretations, and Standards

The FASB issued its first standards in 1984, which required oil and gas companies to use the full-cost method. The FASB also issued several interpretations and standards regarding oil and gas accounting, which helped to clarify the requirements and provide more guidance to companies.

1985

SEC's Office of Compliance

The SEC established the Office of Compliance, which was responsible for overseeing the implementation of the SEC's accounting standards. The office was intended to ensure that companies were following the standards and to provide guidance to companies on how to comply with the standards.

1987

SEC's New Accounting Standards

The SEC issued new accounting standards, which required oil and gas companies to use the full-cost method. The standards were intended to provide more guidance to companies on how to comply with the standards and to ensure that the standards were being followed.

SEC's New and Old Accounting Standards

The SEC issued new and old accounting standards, which required oil and gas companies to use the full-cost method. The standards were intended to provide more guidance to companies on how to comply with the standards and to ensure that the standards were being followed.
