

A man with a backpack is standing on a rocky outcrop, looking out over a vast blue ocean under a clear sky. The man is wearing a black t-shirt and dark pants. The backpack is large and dark. The ocean is a deep blue, and the sky is a light blue with some wispy clouds near the horizon. The overall mood is contemplative and inspiring.

Lovett,Clive G. Jones,Monica G. Turner,Kathleen C. Weathers,2007-12-21 Among the most difficult problems in the life sciences is the challenge to understand the details of how ecosystems watersheds landscapes function Yet the welfare of all life not just the human species depends upon the successful functioning of diverse and complicated ecosystems each with various dimensions and compositions Central to this working is the dominance and to a major extent control of ecosystems by organisms which means that these systems are constantly changing as the component organisms change and evolve. Such changes increase the challenge to understand the functioning of ecosystems and landscapes. Moreover, understanding the interactions among the myriad components of these systems is mind boggling as there are scores of biotic probably many thousands of species when the microbial components are fully enumerated through genomics and countless abiotic ions, molecules and compounds, entities all simultaneously interacting and responding to diverse external factors to produce functional or dysfunctional environments for life. This book focuses on the problems of connectedness and ecosystem functioning. It is difficult enough to understand how an ecosystem functions when it is considered in isolation but all ecosystems are open and connected to everything else. Clearly the inputs to any ecosystem are the outputs from others and vice versa and as such the fluxes represent major if not critical points for managing or changing the overall functioning of an ecosystem or landscape. A major challenge is to find appropriate conceptual frameworks to address these complicated problems.

Transdisciplinary Challenges in Landscape Ecology and Restoration Ecology - An Anthology Zev Naveh, 2007-06-06 Capitalizing on forty years of intensive ecological studies, this anthology presents a collection of widely dispersed major publications on theoretical and practical Mediterranean, global environmental and landscape issues. Each chapter features a comprehensive study of ecological and landscape issues synthesized in the introduction and woven with autobiographical experiences. The concluding chapter calls for a transdisciplinary shift in all environmental scientific fields and particularly in landscape and restoration ecology to cope with the complex, closely interwoven ecological, socio-economical, political and cultural crises facing human society during the present crucial transition from the industrial to the post-industrial, global information age. Updating and broadening the scope of the groundbreaking Springer book on Landscape Theory and Applications by the author and Lieberman (1994), this is a unique transdisciplinary attempt based on advanced systems complexity theories which link the natural and human sciences.

an ethnically divided city While acknowledging the existence of internal borders the chapters in this book assert that they are not solid nor fixed and by exploring how they become material or immaterial the book offers a deeper understanding of the city s complex dynamics Accordingly the chapters in this book are attentive to how ethnic divides materialise or lose importance because of socio political contingencies Events groups and spaces that promote reconciliation from the bottom up are examined not necessarily to assess their success and failures but rather to look at how they create networks gain trust and form platforms that generate novel understandings of ethnic loyalties and party memberships Further and drawing both on the empirical data and theoretical reflections this volume contributes to broader debates about divided cities by suggesting the need to engage with these cities in their complexities rather than reducing them to their ethno national divisions The book engages with socio political and economic complexities in order to shed light on how ethnic conflicts and resulting spatial partitioning are often just the surface of much more complex dynamics that are far less easy to disentangle and represent The chapters in this book were originally published in Space and Polity
