Improving Collection of Indicators of Criminal Justice System Involvement in Population Health Data Programs National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, 2017-03-13 In the U S criminal justice system in 2014 an estimated 2.2 million people were in incarcerated or under correctional supervision on any given day and another 4.7 million were under community supervision such as probation or parole Among all U S adults 1 in 31 is involved with the criminal justice system many of them having had recurring encounters The ability to measure the effects of criminal justice involvement and incarceration on health and health disparities has been a challenge due largely to limited and inconsistent measures on criminal justice involvement and any data on incarceration in health data collections The presence of a myriad of confounding factors such as socioeconomic status and childhood disadvantage also makes it hard to isolate and identify a causal relationship between criminal justice involvement and health The Bureau of Justice Statistics collects periodic health data on the people who are incarcerated at any given time but few national level surveys have captured criminal justice system involvement for people previously involved in the system or those under community supervision nor have they collected systematic data on the effects that go beyond the incarcerated individuals themselves In March 2016 the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine held a workshop meant to assist the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation ASPE and Office of the Minority Health OMH in the U S Department of Health and Human Services in identifying measures of criminal justice involvement that will further their understanding of the socioeconomic determinants of health Participants investigated the feasibility of collecting criminal justice experience data with national household based health surveys This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop

The Growing Gap in Life Expectancy by Income National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Board on Mathematical Sciences and Their Applications, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Committee on the Long-Run Macroeconomic Effects of the Aging U.S. Population--Phase II, 2015-09-17 The U S population is aging Social Security projections suggest that between 2013 and 2050 the population aged 65 and over will almost double from 45 million to 86 million One key driver of population aging is ongoing increases in life expectancy Average U S life expectancy was 67 years for males and 73 years for females five decades ago the averages are now 76 and 81 respectively It has long been the case that better educated higher income people enjoy longer life expectancies than less educated lower income people The causes include early life conditions behavioral factors such as nutrition exercise and smoking behaviors stress and access to health care services all of which can vary across education and income Our major entitlement programs Medicare Medicaid Social Security and Supplemental Security Income have come to deliver disproportionately larger lifetime benefits to higher income people because on average they are increasingly collecting those benefits over more years than others This report studies the impact the growing gap in life expectancy has on the present value of lifetime benefits that people with higher or lower earnings will receive from major entitlement programs The analysis presented in The Growing Gap in Life Expectancy by Income goes beyond an examination of the existing literature by providing the first comprehensive estimates of how lifetime benefits are affected by the changing distribution of life expectancy The report also explores from a lifetime benefit perspective how the growing gap in longevity affects traditional policy analyses of reforms to the nation s leading entitlement programs This in depth analysis of the economic impacts of the longevity gap will inform debate and assist decision makers economists and researchers
