Abstract
Regulation of plant growth and development is controlled by a complex network of signaling pathways. The plant hormone auxin plays a central role in this process. Auxin signaling is initiated by the binding of auxin to its receptor, which leads to the activation of a signaling cascade involving several proteins, including the auxin-inducible transcription factor (AUX-IAA) and the auxin-responsive element (ARE). This cascade ultimately leads to the activation of auxin-responsive genes, which regulate plant growth and development. In this review, we discuss the role of auxin in plant growth and development, focusing on the signaling pathways involved in auxin action.
