Demo Account: Although demo accounts attempt to replicate real markets, they operate in a simulated market environment. As such, there are key differences that distinguish them from real accounts, including but not limited to, the lack of slippage or real-time market liquidity, a delay in pricing, and the execution of some orders which may not be executed in real accounts. The operational experience when trading orders in a demo environment may result in differently executed transactions, but it is not intended to be a source of exposure. There may be instances where margin requirements differ from those of live accounts as orders in demo accounts may not always receive full margin of real orders.

The background of the interface shows a table of market data on the left, a large candlestick chart in the center, and various account and order management panels on the right and bottom.
