

The Digestive System

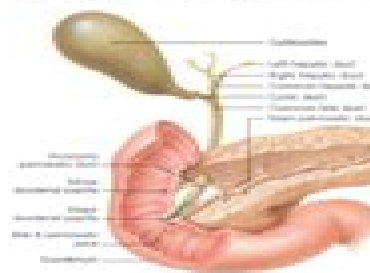

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

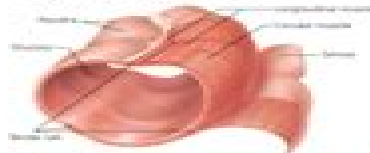

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, digested material enters the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, which is connected to the stomach by the duodenal papilla. The liver, pancreas, and gallbladder are located in the abdominal cavity near the duodenum. The liver produces bile, which is stored in the gallbladder. The pancreas produces pancreatic juice, which is also stored in the gallbladder. Bile and pancreatic juice are released into the duodenum to help with digestion.

Layers of large intestine

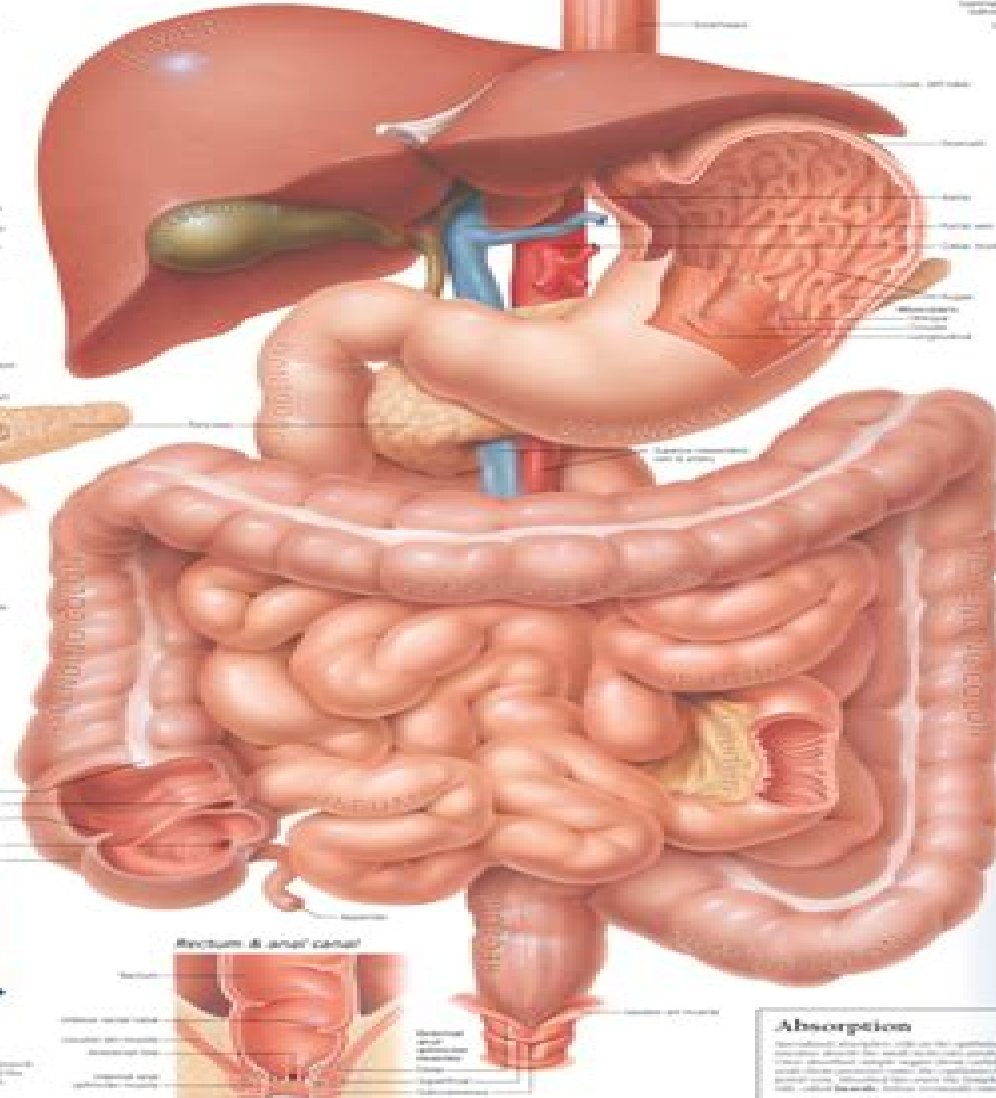

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, the sigmoid colon, and the rectum. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food. It also produces and stores feces until they can be eliminated from the body.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

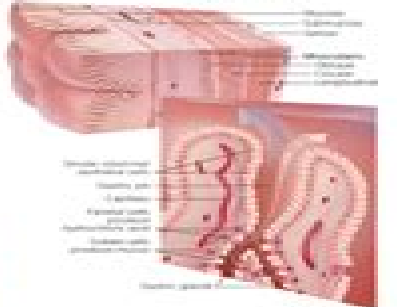

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, which is produced by the salivary glands, helps to break down the food into smaller pieces. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and produce saliva, which is then swallowed and moves down the esophagus.

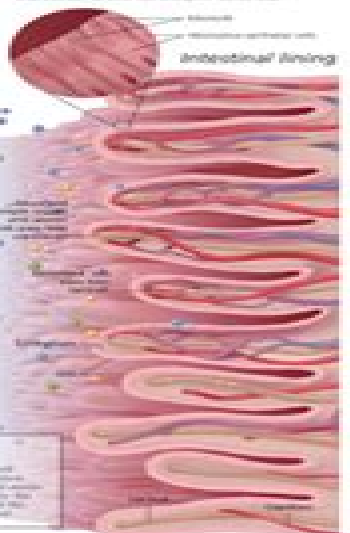

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for breaking down food into smaller pieces. It is located in the upper abdominal cavity. The stomach wall is made of muscle and is lined with a mucous membrane. The stomach is connected to the esophagus and the small intestine.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for absorbing nutrients from the food. It is located in the lower abdominal cavity. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. The small intestine is connected to the stomach and the large intestine.

Absorption

Nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream through the walls of the small intestine. The nutrients are then transported to the rest of the body. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food.
