Human Ecology Journal:

Human Ecology Society for Human Ecology. Conference, 1991 Human Ecology, 1972 Human Ecology Daniel G. Kasperson, Sandra T. Marquart-Pyatt, Allan Mazur, Ortwin Renn, Dirk Scheer, 2021-09-24 The desire to understand people's influence on ecosystems has inspired scientific studies and analyses of the stress individuals and communities place on the environment human well being and the tradeoffs between them As an emerging discipline Structural Human Ecology is devoted to unlocking the dynamic links between population environment social organization and technology The new field offers cutting edge research in risk analysis that can be used to evaluate environmental policies and thus help citizens and societies worldwide learn how to most effectively mitigate human impacts on the biosphere The essays in this volume were presented by leading international scholars at a 2011 symposium honoring the late Dr Eugene Rosa then Boeing Distinguished Professor of Environmental Sociology at WSU J. discipline can be traced to the Greeks and a lengthy list of developments in natural history science Ecology also has notably developed in other cultures Traditional knowledge as it is called includes the human propensity for intuitive knowledge intelligent relations understanding and for passing on information about the natural world and the human experience The term ecology was coined by Ernst Haeckel in 1866 and defined by direct reference to the economy of nature Like other contemporary researchers of his time Haeckel adopted his terminology from Carl Linnaeus where human ecological connections were more evident In his 1749 publication Specimen academicum de oeconomia naturae Linnaeus developed a science that included the economy and polis of nature Polis stems from its Greek roots for a political community originally based on the city states sharing its roots with the word police in reference to the promotion of growth and maintenance of good social order in a community Linnaeus was also the first to write about the close affinity between humans and primates Linnaeus presented early ideas found in modern aspects to human ecology including the balance of nature while

Human Ecology of Beringia John F. Hoffecker, Scott A. Elias, 2007-06-26 Twenty five thousand years ago sea level fell more than 400 feet below its present position as a consequence of the growth of immense ice sheets in the Northern Hemisphere A dry plain stretching 1 000 miles from the Arctic Ocean to the Aleutians became exposed between northeast Asia and Alaska and across that plain most likely walked the first people of the New World This book describes what is known about these people and the now partly submerged land named Beringia which they settled during the final millennia of the Ice Age Humans first occupied Beringia during a twilight period when rising sea levels had not yet caught up with warming climates Although the land bridge between northeast Asia and Alaska was still present warmer and wetter climates were rapidly transforming the Beringian steppe into shrub tundra This volume synthesizes current research some previously unpublished on the archaeological sites and rapidly changing climates and biota of the period suggesting that the absence of woody shrubs to help fire bone fuel may have been the barrier to earlier settlement and that from the outset the Beringians developed a postglacial economy similar to that of later northern interior peoples The book opens with a review of current research and the major problems and debates regarding the environment and archaeology of Beringia It then describes Beringian environments and the controversies surrounding their interpretation traces the evolving adaptations of early humans to the cold environments of northern Eurasia which set the stage for the settlement of Beringia and provides a detailed account of the archaeological record in three chapters each of which is focused on a specific slice of time between 15 000 and 11 500 years ago In conclusion the authors present an interpretive summary of the human ecology of Beringia and discuss its relationship to the wider problem of the peopling of the New World

Racism and Human Ecology Katharina Loeber, 2019-01-21 The apartheid era in South Africa lasted more than 40 years It was marked by political repression and the attempt to create a homogeneous white South Africa which meant excluding the non white majority population The establishment and maintenance of white supremacy in South Africa by colonialism and since 1948 grand apartheid was not only the result of racist regulations and laws but also followed a scientific logic to justify the resettlement and expulsion of South African blacks The history of South Africa from 1948 to 1994 can also be seen as the history of a major society spanning project an attempt to build a modern state on the basis of racial segregation This work investigates the factors that make it possible to stabilize a policy based on virtually impossible prerequisites over four decades Ethnic categorization territorial planning and environmental protection measures Archaeology as Human Ecology Karl W. Butzer, 1982-05-31
