This volume reports the proceedings of a NATO Advanced Workshop held in Castelvechio Pascoli Italy from August 28 September 1 1989 An important inspiration for this Workshop came from our studies in Helsinki and Denmark which have found that exposure to an influenza epidemic during the second trimester of fetal development increases the risk of adult schizophrenia This finding has stimulated an important new hypothesis in the study of the etiology of schizophrenia It has suggested the possibility that disturbances of brain development during gestation may contribute to the risk of adult schizophrenia We determined that it would be of value to bring together schizophrenia researchers and those doing basic studies of the development of the brain Both groups of researchers were encouraged to communicate at a level that would help other scientists to integrate their knowledge and techniques into their own discipline For this reason perhaps the papers of this volume are remarkably clear and not difficult to understand The first four chapters describe the neurochemical and structural aspects of brain development The chapter by Dziegielewska and Saunders discusses transport mechanisms and the properties of endogenous and exogenous substances that control the internal environment of the developing brain In the second chapter Nowakowski reports on his studies of the development of the hippocampus in mice genetically inbred to exhibit disruptions of neural migration
