

The Digestive System

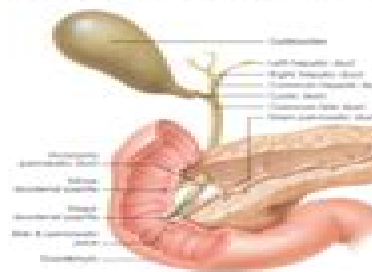

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, large intestine, and rectum to be eliminated from the body. The digestive system also includes accessory organs such as the salivary glands, liver, and pancreas.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile secreted by the liver and releases it into the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

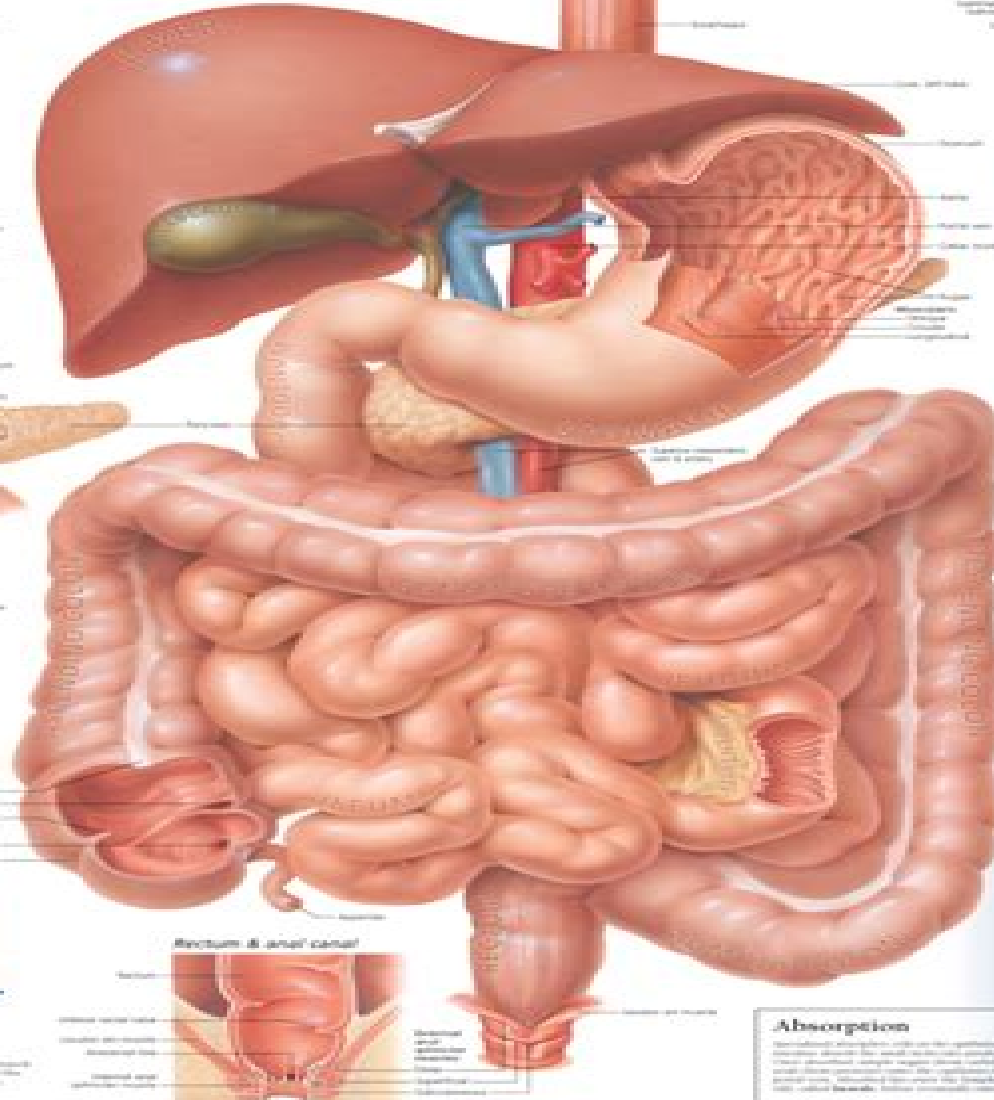

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the colon, and the rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter. The large intestine also houses the cecum, colon, and rectum.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

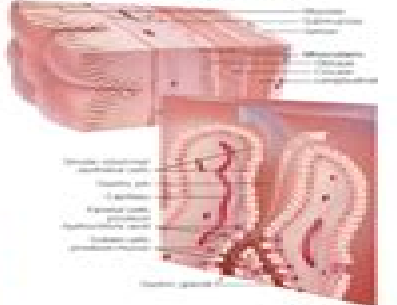

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, contains the enzyme amylase which begins the digestion of carbohydrates. Saliva also contains mucin, which lubricates the food and helps it move down the esophagus.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for mixing food with gastric juices. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscularis, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the majority of digestion and absorption. It is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of most nutrients and water from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption.
