Boles, 2001 Invoking the strong ties they sense between the courses of their lives and their careers the sixteen historians of religion who have contributed to Autobiographical Reflections on Southern Religious History share their thoughts and motivations In these highly personal essays both pioneering and promising young scholars discuss their work and interests as they recall how the circumstances of their upbringing and education steered them toward religious history They tell of their own time and place and of their growing awareness of how religion ties into larger social issues gender class and most notably race Indeed one essay begins I was asked to write about why I came to study religion in the South It was then I realized that it was because my grandfather had been lynched Lutheran Jewish Catholic Methodist and Episcopal viewpoints are represented as of course are Baptist Some contributors have stood in the pulpit others at least commenced their higher education with that aim While some contributors were born and reared and now work in the Bible Belt others are outsiders physically philosophically or both Some came from intellectual traditions others were the first in their family to attend college Despite their common interest in its history southern religion is anything but an intellectual abstraction for the contributors to this book It is a potent force and here sixteen men and women offer themselves as proof of its power to shape lives Conceptualising Reflection In Teacher Development James Calderhead, Peter Gates, 2003-09-02 Reflection has become widely recognised as a crucial element in the professional growth of teachers Terms such as reflective teaching enquiry orientated teacher education teachers as researchers and reflective practitioner have become quite prolific in discussions of classroom practice and professional development It is frequently presumed that reflection is an intrinsically good and desirable aspect of teaching and teacher education and that teachers in becoming more reflective will in some sense be better teachers though such claims have been rarely subject to detailed scrutiny Each of the chapters in this book is concerned with exploring the concept of reflection and considering its contributions to teacher education The papers range across different stages of professional development some focusing in particular on pre service education others on in service or professional development generally Some of the papers are concerned with particular strategies for promoting reflection and how they might operate in a teacher education context others dwell more upon a theoretical appreciation of how reflection facilitates in the processes of professional development and how it relates to issues of quality in teacher education

The Role of Reflection in Managerial Learning Marilyn W. Daudelin, Kent W. Seibert, 1999-09-30 Challenging work experiences are the richest source of learning for today s managers Yet lessons embedded in these experiences are not always obvious This comprehensive book describes a critical yet under researched element of how managers learn from these experiences reflection Today s workplace demands continual learning which in turn requires reflection While this book supports the prevailing view that reflection is central to experiential learning it challenges the traditional views that it is the same as contemplation that it is incompatible with management and that it is time consuming and unnatural for managers Original quantitative and qualitative research reported in this book indicates that two different yet complementary modes of managerial reflection exist active and proactive Active reflection is something that managers naturally engage in during challenging job experiences whereas managers must be prompted to engage in proactive reflection Both modes involve processes of intentional inquiry Different forces are necessary to stimulate each type of reflection Based on these findings the claim is made that the potential to learn from experience is greatest when managers intentionally engage in both modes Accordingly a holistic model that integrates active and proactive reflection is presented This model has important implications for theorists and researchers of managerial learning by identifying previously unreported aspects of reflection It is also relevant to practitioners and companies who desire to enhance what their managers learn from their workplace experience
