CONFIGURATION

The VMAX 40K array configurations are designed for extensive storage environments. The array configurations include at least one system bay that can house from one to eight engines, and a number of left or right populated storage bays, depending on the number of engines in the array. Angled into the one full-width bay with three drive rails, 170 (left), 170 (right), 170 (left), 170 (right) and 170 (left) are located in the array.

The maximum array configuration size depends on the type of drive array architecture chosen. If one 170 (left) drive rail is used, the maximum array configuration includes an additional system bay and 170 storage bays. If two 170 (left) drive rails are configured, the maximum configuration consists of a system bay and 170 storage bays. Both left types can be used within the array but not within the same storage bay.

Each bay contains storage bays and dedicated control bays connected to a dedicated engine in the system bay. Depending on the size of the array, they are referred to as subarray or subarray 2 (SAB).

System bay subarray is an array subarray unit available for arrays with three or more engines. The second, physically separated system bay is used when a third (SAB 2), 170 (SAB 2), or second (SAB 2) is added to the array. The engine and its subsequent engine are added to the second system bay. The angled system bay placement is suitable for drive bays that cannot accommodate large, contiguous array placements. The maximum distance between both system bays is 21.0m (68.9 ft).
