David Burnett has been fighting a seemingly endless and perhaps futile war to stop conflict diamonds from entering his country. But he has the very best team there is helping him. He trusts them one and all with his life and would do anything in return. Of course, what he wants to do with Hope has nothing to do with team dynamics and never has. The heat is rising as they go on a dangerous mission. Thrown into tighter quarters than ever before, David and Hope must trust no one but one another if they hope to survive. He backs away, hurting her in the process. When Alana is the victim of a violent crime and lands in the hospital, Noah is determined to protect the fragile beauty who holds his heart. Can he convince Alana how he feels before it's too late? Or has he lost all chance with her? He liked his job working for the sheriff's department; he had good friends; life was good. If only he could figure out the puzzle of Selena Monroe. She acted shy and reserved, always keeping to herself. Was it real, or was it just an act? He wanted to know who the real Selena was. The problem was so did someone else. Someone was stalking the quiet beauty, and Harrison was determined to protect her. Would he be able to keep her safe and discover the kind of love he always thought was a myth?
