How Parents Deal with the Education of Their Child on the Autism Spectrum Jasmine McDonald, 2014-11-26 Powerful moral social justice and political arguments have convinced parents that it is their democratic right to place their children on the autism spectrum into mainstream educational environments so that their children may eventually take up their rightful place in a mainstream adult life But what is really happening for some of these parents when they try to gain and maintain an appropriate education for their child in these mainstream contexts and beyond What is the educational experience like for these families who are in the midst of this generational change from historical exclusion to inclusion Current research indicates that while islands of excellent mainstream inclusive practice do exist the educational experience for many students on the autism spectrum can often be one of hostility inconsistency and unreliability Without appropriate understanding of best practice educational methods these students can present an inordinate educational challenge to both parents and educators alike How do parents deal with such complex educational profiles How do they continue to maximize their children s development over time What are the barriers that hinder their quest What are the facilitators that help their quest To answer these questions this book provides an in depth recent examination of the real life journeys of families who attempted to gain an appropriate education for their children on the autism spectrum including the areas of diagnosis early intervention mainstream schooling home education segregated schooling and transition to work and further study Jasmine McDonald BA DipEd MSpecEd Hons PhD is affiliated with the Telethon Kids Institute University of Western Australia Perth Australia Her current work includes trialling a peer to peer mentoring program for tertiary students on the autism spectrum This program runs at Curtin University in Western Australia and will be replicated and evaluated at the University of Western Australia The results will eventually be shared through the Australian Government Autism Cooperative Research Centre CRC website <http://www.autismcrc.com.au>

Langston, 2011-06-07 Encouragement and inspiration for special needs families God has a unique and magnificent purpose for every child a purpose that is no less important for special needs children Through the story of her own ongoing struggles and victories raising her autistic son Kelly Langston brings to light God s promises for exceptional kids and highlights covenants that assure special needs parents of their children s potential and beauty Break the Stigma: Autism Nichole E Scheerer , April Hargreaves , Catalina Sau Man Ng , Matthew Daniel Lerner, 2024-12-17 While awareness of neurodiversity and specific forms of neurodivergence such as autism has increased over the last few years autism stigma and prejudice against autistic people remains a critical issue that warrants further attention and investigation The experience of stigma and prejudice such as discriminatory actions and attitudes towards autistic individuals on both a personal and public level can have many negative impacts across one's lifetime. These experiences can lead people on the autism spectrum and their families to avoid seeking help which can delay diagnosis and access to supportive services of not only autism itself but also co-occurring physical and psychological health needs. Prejudiced beliefs against autistic people may lead to many forms of discrimination including but not limited to medical education and employment discrimination. These attitudes can be built into society at a systemic level and influence policies that govern access to supports and our communities. Additionally, autism stigma and prejudice against autistic people such as stereotypical portrayals of autistic people in media and the language we use to describe autistic people can be invalidating to a person's autistic identity and to autistic culture. Further, the impacts of stigma and prejudice can be internalized by autistic individuals which may not only have poor effects on their wellbeing but also increase the want and/or need to mask or camouflage to pass as non-autistic. Masking or camouflaging can reduce a person's sense of belonging, self-esteem, sense of self-worth and close relationships, all of which are associated with poor outcomes. It can also lead to avoidance of opportunities such as connection with other autistic individuals that could increase quality of life. This Research Topic aims to showcase evidence on why the stigma surrounding autism and the prejudice against autistic people are so detrimental. It hopes to provide insights into research and interventions on how stigma and prejudice can be tackled as well as awareness, understanding and acceptance raised in the hope that the research presented will translate to best practice applications in clinical, public health, policy and community settings. We invite researchers to submit a range of articles including but not limited to original research, articles, reviews, meta-analyses, opinions, perspectives and case reports to provide new evidence on the following:

- Harmful impacts of stigma and prejudice on autistic people
- Interventions on reducing stigma surrounding and prejudice against autistic people
- Health promotion in autism, i.e. approaches that increase the mental and physical wellbeing of autistic people
- Interventions targeted at increasing understanding of autism and neurodiversity as well as increasing acceptance and advocacy of as well as allyship with autistic people
- Examining intersectionality in autism stigma and/or prejudice towards autistic people of diverse backgrounds

Autism: The Movement Perspective Elizabeth B. Torres, Anne M. Donnellan, 2015-05-19. Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) is portrayed as cognitive and social disorders. Undoubtedly, impairments in communication and restricted repetitive behaviors that now define the disorders have a profound impact on social interactions. But can we go beyond the descriptive, observational nature of this definition and objectively measure that amalgam of motions and sensations that we call behavior? In this Research Topic, we bring movement and its sensation to the forefront of autism research, diagnosis and treatment. We gather researchers across disciplines with the unifying goal of recognizing movement and sensory disturbances as core symptoms of the disorder. We also hear confirmation from the perspective of autism self-advocates and parents. Those important sources of evidence along with the research presented in this topic demonstrate without a doubt that profound movement and sensory differences do exist in ASD and that they are quantifiable. The work presented in this Research Topic shows us that quantifiable differences in movements have a better chance than current observational techniques to help us uncover subtle solutions that the nervous system with autism has already spontaneously self discovered and utilized in daily living Where the naked eye would miss the unique subtleties that help each individual cope instrumentation and fine kinematic analyses of motions help us uncover inherent capacities and predispositions of the person with autism The work presented in this topic helps us better articulate through the voices of parents and self advocates those sensory motor differences that current inventories could not possibly uncover These differences are seldom perceived as they take place at timescales and frequencies that fall largely beneath our conscious awareness To the person in the spectrum living with this disorder and to the caregiver creating accommodations to help the affected loved one these subtleties are very familiar though Indeed they are often used in clever ways to facilitate daily routines We have waited much too long in science to listen to the very people that we are trying to define understand and help Being autism a social problem by definition it is remarkable that not a single diagnosis inventory measures the dyadic social interaction that takes place between the examiner and the examinees Indeed we have conceived the autistic person within a social context where we are incapable by definition of accepting those differences The burden is rather placed on the affected person to whom much too often we refer to in the third person as non verbal without intentionality without empathy or emotions without a theory of mind among other purely psychological guesses It is then too easy and shockingly allowed to reshape that person to mold that person to better conform to our social expectations and to extinguish behaviors that are socially unacceptable even through the use of aversive punishing reinforcement techniques if need be And yet none of those techniques have had a single shred of objective scientific evidence of their effectiveness We have not objectively measured once nor have we physiologically characterized once any of those perceived features that we so often use to observationally define what we may think the autistic phenotype may be We have not properly quantified beyond paper and pencil methods the effectiveness of interventions in autism Let us not forget when we do our science that we are all part of the broad human spectrum
