These authors also found that the use of a single, non-validated questionnaire to assess the prevalence of depression was a limitation of the study. The authors concluded that the use of a validated questionnaire would have improved the reliability of the results.

For 1998, the average number of hours worked per week by full-time employees in the United States was 41.9 hours. The standard deviation was 4.7 hours. Assume that the number of hours worked per week by full-time employees in the United States is normally distributed. Find the probability that a randomly selected full-time employee in the United States worked more than 45 hours per week in 1998. Round your answer to four decimal places.
