

Writing a research report

A research report can be based on practical work, research by reading or a study of an organisation or industrial/workplace situation.

1. Preparing

Identify the purpose/the aims of the research/research question.

Identify the audience. – lecturer/supervisor/company/organization management/staff. The amount of background included will vary depending on the knowledge of the “audience”.

2. Collecting and organising information

There are two main sources of information depending on the research task:

1. Reading — theory and other research
2. Research — experiments, data collection - questionnaires, surveys, observation, interviews.

Organise and collate the information in a logical order. Make sure you record the bibliographic information of your reading as you go along.

See Quick Tips on mind mapping techniques.

3. Planning

Before writing the report, prepare a detailed plan in outline form.

Consider the following:

Logical organisation

Information in a report must be organized logically. Communicate the main ideas followed by supporting details and examples. Start with the more important or significant information and move on to the least important information.

Headings

Use headings and suitable sub headings to clearly show the different sections. In longer reports the sections should be numbered.

4. Writing the report

1. Draft the report from your detailed plan.
2. Do not worry too much about the final form and language, but rather on presenting the ideas coherently and logically.
3. Redraft and edit. Check that sections contain the required information and use suitable headings, check ideas flow in a logical order and remove any unnecessary information.
4. Write in an academic style and tone.
 - Use a formal objective style.
 - Generally avoid personal pronouns; however, some reports based on your own field experience or work placement can be reflective the first person can be used. For example, “I observed...”. If in doubt about this, check with the lecturer.

Khare,Wojciech Maly,2012-12-06 Over the years there has been a large increase in the functionality available on a single integrated circuit This has been mainly achieved by a continuous drive towards smaller feature sizes larger dies and better packing efficiency However this greater functionality has also resulted in substantial increases in the capital investment needed to build fabrication facilities Given such a high level of investment it is critical for IC manufacturers to reduce manufacturing costs and get a better return on their investment The most obvious method of reducing the manufacturing cost per die is to improve manufacturing yield Modern VLSI research and engineering which includes design manufacturing and testing encompasses a very broad range of disciplines such as chemistry physics material science circuit design mathematics and computer science Due to this diversity the VLSI arena has become fractured into a number of separate sub domains with little or no interaction between them This is the case with the relationships between testing and manufacturing From Contamination to Defects Faults and Yield Loss Simulation and Applications focuses on the core of the interface between manufacturing and testing i e the contamination defect fault relationship The understanding of this relationship can lead to better solutions of many manufacturing and testing problems Failure mechanism models are developed and presented which can be used to accurately estimate probability of different failures for a given IC This information is critical in solving key yield related applications such as failure analysis fault modeling and design manufacturing Rehumanizing Housing
