RESEARCH PURPOSE: Assess the following questions with a post hoc (2 x 2) factorial regression with a random intercept:

1. How does England's more advanced status as a maritime nation affect its political structure? That Britain's status as a maritime nation provides the major asset which enables England to rise above continental Europe, to be independent of the continent, and to be able to act with more freedom.
2. What was the principal political principle of the British? How was it applied to the people of England? As the great central idea was that the king was the fountain of all political authority, authority lay with the monarch.
3. Why is the English system of government called "constitutional"? That constitutional means an order of things which cannot be changed without the consent of the nation. This constitutes a permanent fixed principle and gives the nation freedom.
4. What was the main foundation of the development of constitutionalism? That religious institutions, the church system, were the basis of the monarch's power. This helped that the monarch was subject to laws as well as the monarch himself.
5. What influence did the English monarchs have on the development of the constitution of the eighteenth century? That monarchs bought the great constitutional rights they now enjoy from the parliaments which represented the people.
