Structure & Function

The judicial branch is responsible for interpreting the Constitution and laws. It is made up of the Supreme Court and lower federal courts. The Supreme Court is the highest court in the land and has the final say on all legal matters.

Lower federal courts are responsible for hearing cases that involve federal law. They are organized into circuits, with each circuit having a court of appeals. The Supreme Court is made up of nine justices, who are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The Supreme Court's Judicial Review

Students will learn about the Supreme Court's power of judicial review.

Working & Making

The Supreme Court's power of judicial review allows it to declare laws and executive actions unconstitutional. This power was established in the landmark case of Marbury v. Madison in 1803.

Judicial Process

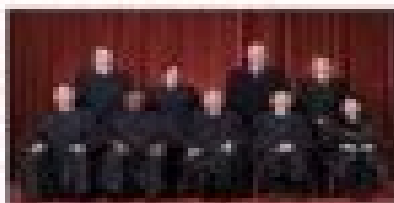

The judicial process involves the filing of a lawsuit, the discovery phase, the trial, and the appeal. The Supreme Court typically hears cases that involve a conflict between two states or a federal government and a state. The Court's decisions are final and binding on all lower courts.
