

Lung Capacity Lab

name: JARED
DATE: 1/20/20

Human lung capacity is an issue made possible by pleural cavity - negative pressure in pleural cavity. One way to measure volume of pleural cavity is by measuring lung capacity. Lung capacity can also be measured using a spirometer. This data provides very precise measurements and is collected using a spirometer device.

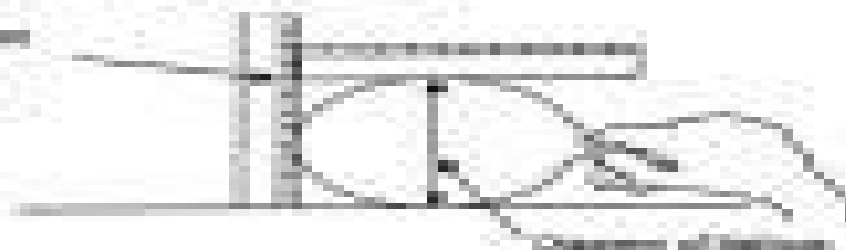

Several different lung volume measurements can be made:

1. Tidal volume is the largest possible amount of air that can be inhaled after breathing a normal breath.
2. Expiratory reserve is the amount of air that can be inhaled in the lungs after exhaling normally (it is the portion that remains inhaled air).
3. Total volume is the amount of air that can be inhaled during normal breathing.

Part A: Measuring

1. Measure the balloon circumference.
2. Take an average length measurement. Then divide all the air that can be inhaled and exhaled by the balloon circumference to get the average.
3. Measure and record the diameter of the balloon in centimeters (see Data Table below). The difference between the two (circumference) is the diameter.

Record circumference when the length of the balloon is the same as the radius (the balloon will be flat). This is the balloon's diameter.

4. Deflate the balloon and do three more trials. Record the diameter of the balloon in your Data Table.
5. When done, take the LAST PAPER circle provided. Another classroom goes with the diameter.

Try Number	Percentage of Balloon in Lungs First Trial	Volume of Balloon Last Trial
1	19.5	2000 2625
2	19.5	2625
3	20	2750
